Subject: Music licenses

Dear Sirs:

The current rules for licensing music have allowed for overbearing and onerous fees not based on a level competitive platform. The current rules need to be reigned in to allow for small occasional venue's to be able to survive and promote music. Most performers get their start in small non paid establishments and seldom filled if ever to fire capacity restrictions. The current rules stifle growth of music, hurt business, and contribute very little to original artists.

Consider base line capacity targets or revenue levels to restrict onerous blanket self serving enforcement that actually is counterproductive.

Sincerely,

Donald J Bertuleit
