From: Steven Solomon <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 13:36:34 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Dr. Steven Solomon

[redacted]

From: Anastacia Russell <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 13:36:43 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Miss Anastacia Russell
[redacted]

From: Andrew Gates <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 13:36:44 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Mr. Andrew Gates

[redacted]

From: Bruce And Carol DENNING <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 13:36:58 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Mx. Bruce And Carol DENNING
[redacted]

From: Megan Garrett <PII>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <PII>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 13:36:58 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Mrs. Megan Garrett
PII

From: Steven Solomon <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 13:36:58 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Dr. Steven Solomon

[redacted]

From: Stephen Dutschke <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 13:36:58 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Mr. Stephen Dutschke

[redacted]

From: Richard Stobbs <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 13:37:16 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Mr. Richard Stobbs
[redacted]

From: Glen Weissman <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 13:37:16 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Mr. Glen Weissman

[redacted]

From: Lesley Schultz <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 13:37:16 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Ms. Lesley Schultz
[redacted]

From: Steven Solomon <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 13:37:17 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Dr. Steven Solomon
[redacted]

From: Deanna White <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 13:37:18 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Mrs. Deanna White

[redacted]

From: James Norris <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 13:37:18 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Mr. James Norris
[redacted]

From: Kathy Mason <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 13:37:23 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Ms. Kathy Mason

[redacted]

From: Dawne Kinsey <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 13:37:24 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Dawne Kinsey
[redacted]
https://protect2.fireeye.com/v1/url?k=022fe5a6-67638cf4-0228c143-74fe4867716e-cc310b26118e8343&q=1&e=72292e37-a4f7-463d-972b-5454ae32d673&u=http%3A%2F%2Fwww.cordelia_bonanno%40yahoo.com%2F

From: bill Watson <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 13:37:32 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Mr. bill Watson
[redacted]

From: Ellen Kagan <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 13:37:41 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Ellen Kagan
[redacted]

From: Stephen Dutschke <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 13:37:44 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Mr. Stephen Dutschke
[redacted]

From: Matthew Totaro <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 13:37:44 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Matthew Totaro
[redacted]

From: Bruce And Carol DENNING <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 13:37:44 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Mx. Bruce And Carol DENNING
[redacted]

From: Stanley Moore <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 13:37:59 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Stanley Moore
[redacted]

From: Samuel Rothschild <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 13:37:59 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Samuel Rothschild
[redacted]

From: "Robert H. Feuchter" <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 13:37:59 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Mr. Robert H. Feuchter

[redacted]

From: Richard Stobbs <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 13:38:04 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Mr. Richard Stobbs

[redacted]

From: Barbara Gelder <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 13:38:04 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Dr. Barbara Gelder

[redacted]

From: Robyn Class <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 13:38:05 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Robyn Class

[redacted]

From: Linda ROHRET <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 13:38:05 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Ms. Linda ROHRET
[redacted]

From: Elizabeth Darovic <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 13:38:05 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Ms. Elizabeth Darovic
[redacted]

From: Judy Oates <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 13:38:05 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Ms Judy Oates

[redacted]

From: Derek Binelli <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 13:38:06 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Mr. Derek Binelli
[redacted]

From: Derek Gendvil <PII>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <PII>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 13:38:16 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Mr. Derek Gendvil
PII PII

From: Timothy Hawver-Scott <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 13:38:16 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Mr. Timothy Hawver-Scott
[redacted]

From: Michael Buescher <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 13:38:18 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Mr. Michael Buescher
[redacted]

From: Elsy Shallman <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 13:38:19 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Mrs. Elsy Shallman
[redacted]

From: Elizabeth Darovic <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 13:38:30 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Elizabeth Darovic
[redacted]

From: Jason Galvas <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 13:38:37 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Jason Galvas
[redacted]

From: Frank Chappell <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 13:38:45 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

As a member of the military, chaplain, and father of three daughters, I implore you to maintain what our Constitution guarantees: the separation of religion from the public domain! Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Frank Chappell
[redacted]

From: Suzanne Argenta <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 13:38:45 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Suzanne Argenta
[redacted]

From: Lyda Eddington <PII>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <PII>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 13:38:48 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Pastor Lyda Eddington
PII PII

From: Judith Detert-Moriarty <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 13:39:05 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Ms Judith Detert-Moriarty

[redacted]

From: Diana Ward <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 13:39:06 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Please do not shove your religion at the rest of us.  You would not like it if we forced our religion on you.

Sincerely,
Ms. Diana Ward
[redacted]

From: Cindy Gough <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 13:39:06 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Ms Cindy Gough
[redacted]

From: Milton Strauss <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 13:39:06 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

I am writing to ask your to ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Dr. Milton Strauss
[redacted]

From: Kent Minault <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 13:39:06 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Mr. Kent Minault

[redacted]

From: Janice Burstin <PII>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <PII>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 13:39:16 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Ms. Janice Burstin

PII PII

From: Russ Ziegler <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 13:39:16 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Mr. Russ Ziegler
[redacted]

From: Annmarie Celano <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 13:39:16 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Ms Annmarie Celano
[redacted]

From: Bruce Ross <PII>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <PII>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 13:39:16 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

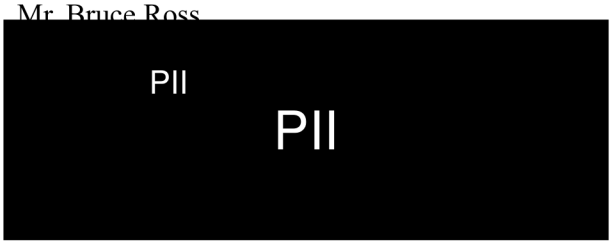
Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.



Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Mr. Bruce Ross

From: Michael Lonergan <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 13:39:21 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Rev. Michael Lonergan

[redacted]

From: Kate Skolnick <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 13:39:23 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Ms. Kate Skolnick
[redacted]

From: Joe Tilley <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 13:39:27 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Mr. Joe Tilley

[redacted]

From: Steve Hanrahan <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 13:39:29 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

I am an Atheist and deserve the same rights as Christians. Muslims, Hindus, Pagans, Buddhists, and people of all other religions do too. America was not founded as a religious state, but the opposite so that all religions (and none) ncan be practiced.

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Steve Hanrahan

[redacted]

From: Richard Sparkes <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 13:39:33 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Because religion is truly the curse of humankind and the opiate of the masses, and because separation of church and state is a bedrock of life in the USA, please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Thank you very much.

Sincerely,
Mr. Richard Sparkes
[redacted]

From: Jordan Briskin <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 13:39:33 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

It is your sworn duty to ensure that the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion AS LONG AS WE DON'T HARM OTHERS.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Mr. Jordan Briskin
[redacted]

From: Mengy Keisling <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 13:39:35 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Mengy Keisling

[redacted]

From: Ellen Zaltzberg <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 13:39:35 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Ellen Zaltzberg

[redacted]

From: Donald Ralston <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 13:39:45 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

I'm retired, living in Milford, Ohio.

I want you to ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Thanks for your consideration.

Sincerely,
Mr Donald Ralston
[redacted]

From: Judy Whitehouse <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 13:39:45 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Ms. Judy Whitehouse
[redacted]

From: Rabbi Shelley Kovar Becker <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 13:39:45 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

As a Jewish clergy person I am very concerned about this issue. Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Rabbi Shelley Kovar Becker

[redacted]

From: Derek Wallentinsen <PII>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <PII>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 13:39:45 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Church-state separation plays a vital role in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

People have the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Sincerely,
Derek Wallentinsen

PII
PII

From: Linda Guthrie <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 13:39:46 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Ms. Linda Guthrie

[redacted]

From: Susan Parson <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 13:39:46 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

Sincerely,
Ms. Susan Parson

[redacted]

From: Melissa Allen <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 13:39:52 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Melissa Allen

[redacted]

From: Shawn Lyon <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 13:39:54 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Keep your mythology out of our schools, our government and our political discourse.  It has NO place in a modern, ethical society.

Sincerely,
Mr. Shawn Lyon

[redacted]

From: Jeffrey Kraengel <PII>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <PII>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 13:39:54 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Mr. Jeffrey Kraengel

PII PII

From: Richard Gillaspie <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 13:40:06 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Mr. Richard Gillaspie
[redacted]

From: connie allison <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 13:40:06 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
connie allison

[redacted]

From: Joanne Fauci <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 13:40:06 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Mrs. Joanne Fauci
[redacted]

From: AnnDee Levy <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 13:40:06 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
AnnDee Levy

[redacted]

From: Kevin Grimes <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 13:40:06 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Mr. Kevin Grimes

[redacted]

From: Matthew Thompson <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 13:40:07 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,

Matthew Thompson
[redacted]

Sincerely,
Mr. Matthew Thompson
[redacted]

From: Kathryn Wilham <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 13:40:12 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Ms. Kathryn Wilham
[redacted]

From: Susanne Groenendaal <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 13:40:17 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Susanne Groenendaal
[redacted]

From: Gregg Morris <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 13:40:19 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Mr Gregg Morris
[redacted]

From: Jeff Willoughby <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 13:40:26 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Mr. Jeff Willoughby

[redacted]

From: Erica Fryer <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 13:40:30 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Erica Fryer
[redacted]

From: Austin Sumpter <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 13:40:33 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Austin Sumpter

[redacted]

From: Linda Guthrie <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 13:40:34 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Ms. Linda Guthrie

[redacted]

From: Matthew Kreps <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 13:40:35 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Mr. Matthew Kreps

[redacted]

From: Richard Miller <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 13:40:36 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Richard Miller

[redacted]

From: Dennis Manning <PII>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <PII>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 13:40:46 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Mr. Dennis Manning

PII PII

From: Jeff Kulp <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 13:40:46 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Major Jeff Kulp
[redacted]

From: Arthur Dorman <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 13:40:54 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Arthur Dorman

[redacted]

From: Betsy Smith <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 13:40:55 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

The earliest settlers came to this country because they worshiped differently from their king and his established religion. This is why the Founders made it clear that our new country wasn't tied to a specific religion or, indeed to any religion at all. Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commision's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Ms. Betsy Smith
[redacted]

From: Bruce Bernstein <PII>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <PII>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 13:41:07 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Mr. Bruce Bernstein

PII PII

From: John Dove <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 13:41:07 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
John Dove
[redacted]

From: Emily Phillips <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 13:41:12 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

While religion and faith may influence each citizen's actions within their society, America was founded on a principle that no religion should be established by the government. The long-valued separation of church and state in the United States remains a necessary tentpole for our democracy.

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Emily Phillips
[redacted]

From: Frank Wilsey <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 13:41:29 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Mr. Frank Wilsey

[redacted]

From: Cynthia Vena <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 13:41:29 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Cynthia Vena

[redacted]

From: Emily Coleman <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 13:41:46 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Emily Coleman
[redacted]

From: Rita Root <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 13:41:47 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

I write today as an ordained Christian minister who is deeply concerned that our nation's deeply held conviction holding that the separation of church and state best ensures freedom for all is being compromised by a very narrow understanding of the Christian faith.

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans. The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Rev. Dr. Rita Root
[redacted]

From: Adrienne Bailin <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 13:41:47 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Adrienne Bailin

Sincerely,
Ms. Adrienne Bailin
[redacted]

From: Louis Arceneaux <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 13:41:47 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Dr. Louis Arceneaux
[redacted]

From: John Costello <PII>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <PII>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 13:41:47 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Mr. John Costello

PII PII

From: Jeffrey Collins <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 13:41:49 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Mr. Jeffrey Collins

[redacted]

From: John Cantilli <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 13:41:55 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
John Cantilli

[redacted]

From: Martin Reiner <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 13:41:56 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Dr. Martin Reiner

[redacted]

From: Benita Malone <PII>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <PII>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 13:41:57 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
ms Benita Malone

PII
PII

From: timothy lockard <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 13:42:07 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
timothy lockard

[redacted]

From: Susanna Levin <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 13:42:13 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Ms. Susanna Levin

[redacted]

From: Hope Blume <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 13:42:22 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Ms. Hope Blume

[redacted]

From: Thomas Blanton <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 13:42:23 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Ms. Thomas Blanton
[redacted]

From: Clara Arbelaez <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 13:42:23 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Clara Arbelaez

[redacted]

From: Theodoric Manley <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 13:42:30 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Theodoric Manley
[redacted]

From: Melanie Smock <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 13:42:33 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Ms. Melanie Smock
[redacted]

From: Janette Jorgensen <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 13:42:40 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Ms. Janette Jorgensen
[redacted]

From: Betty Rover <PII>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <PII>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 13:42:40 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Ms. Betty Rover

PII PII

From: Stan Osborn <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 13:42:57 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

I am a practicing Christian who believes Church and State should be separate.

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Stan Osborn
[redacted]

From: Robert Goldstein <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 13:42:58 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Dr Robert Goldstein
[redacted]

From: Jon Oesting <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 13:42:59 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law.

Sincerely,
Mr Jon Oesting
[redacted]

From: russ ziegler <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 13:43:03 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Mr. russ ziegler
[redacted]

From: JEFFREY M SCHOMER <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 13:43:04 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
JEFFREY M SCHOMER
[redacted]

From: Gerald Young <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 13:43:07 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Mr. Gerald Young

[redacted]

From: Jacob Blaustein <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 13:43:14 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Mr. Jacob Blaustein
[redacted]

From: Cynthia Blackledge <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 13:43:14 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Ms. Cynthia Blackledge
[redacted]

From: Robert Shearrer <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 13:43:14 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Robert Shearrer
[redacted]

From: EDWARD CIACCIO <PII>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <PII>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 13:43:14 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Mr. EDWARD CIACCIO
PII PII

From: Chris Moser <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 13:43:15 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Mr. Chris Moser
[redacted]

From: Chris Morgan <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 13:43:17 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Mr. Chris Morgan
[redacted]

From: Marianne Dietrich <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 13:43:17 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Dr. Marianne Dietrich
[redacted]

From: Robert Kresek <PII>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <PII>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 13:43:20 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Mr. Robert Kresek

PII
PII

From: Nancy Delehanty <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 13:43:30 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others. This is a vital freedom for all Americans. our country must keep church and state separate so all Americans are free to partake of religion or not as our founders explicitly spelled out.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Mrs. Nancy Delehanty
[redacted]

From: Michael Carney <PII>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <PII>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 13:43:30 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Mr. Michael Carney

PII
PII

From: Barbara Garbacz <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 13:43:51 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Ms. Barbara Garbacz
[redacted]

From: Mary Addams <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 13:44:05 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

The Founding Fathers knew the horrific role religion played in wars in Europe for centuries and that's why they wrote that our government would not favor one religion over any another. This is called separation of church and state! It's crucial and one of the bedrocks of our government.

When religion and government collude, both are weakened.

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Mary Addams
[redacted]

From: Jacqueline Alces <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 13:44:06 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Ms. Jacqueline Alces
[redacted]

From: Anthony Ramos Motta <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 13:44:07 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Mr. Anthony Ramos Motta
[redacted]

From: Mike Hall <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 13:44:08 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

"Those who have a sincere regard for the Christian religion can fear no greater evil to it than to have it mingled with affairs of State. Those who love civil liberty must shudder at the idea that this doctrine is ever to prevail in this Republic. Its practical results may be found in the fires of Smithfield; in the dungeons of the Inquisition; in the desolation of Italy, and the moral and political degradation of Spain. It is true, there was a time when this dangerous doctrine had a practical existence in some of the American colonies. The Pilgrims, who had been driven by it from their native homes, and took shelter in the forests of New England, brought with them the very spirit which possessed the tyrants who expelled them. Some of their first acts of Legislation regulated the religion of the people. Frequent, cruel and disgraceful punishments were inflicted for thoughts and opinions, which concerned only the creature and his Creator. Quakers were executed because they did not worship God as the Pilgrim Fathers did. Witchcraft was a capital crime. In short, all of oppression of conscience has arisen from this fatal doctrine.

But when the great men of the Revolution set about establishing a government, which should secure the liberties of the people, they took especial care that the civil administration should be separated from affairs of Church. They left questions of mere sin to be settled between God and His creatures. They left every man to judge of the requirements of Heaven as his own conscience might dictate. —-— -And to Heaven alone they left the judgment and the sanction.. The Constitution of almost every State in the Union contains a section se-curing liberty of conscience."

The Argument. of Thaddeus Stevens, Esq.éefore the Supreme Court of Pa., at Harrisburg, in the Case of Jacob Spec/zt vs. t/ze Commonwealth,"[May 1848]'

Sincerely,
Dr. Mike Hall

[redacted]

From: SEAN DAVIS <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 13:44:08 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Mr. SEAN DAVIS
[redacted]

From: Nicole Uhing <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 13:44:08 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Miss Nicole Uhing
[redacted]

From: Joseph Guarino <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 13:44:08 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Joseph Guarino

[redacted]

From: Jim Carsten <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 13:44:17 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Mr Jim Carsten
[redacted]

From: Chris Busby <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 13:44:21 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Ms. Chris Busby
[redacted]

From: Susan Carter <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 13:44:24 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Mrs Susan Carter
[redacted]

From: Ronald Hobbs <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 13:44:28 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Mr. Ronald Hobbs
[redacted]

From: John Reidy <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 13:44:50 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law for all of us.

Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Sincerely,
Dr. John Reidy

[redacted]

From: Steven Grund <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 13:44:50 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Mr. Steven Grund

[redacted]

From: Randy Gerlach <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 13:45:08 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Ms. Randy Gerlach
[redacted]

From: Edward Lemon <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 13:45:08 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Edward Lemon

[redacted]

From: Harold Harrison <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 13:45:18 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Harold Harrison

[redacted]

From: Aiden Barnes <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 13:45:19 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Rev. Aiden Barnes

[redacted]

From: BART CENTRE <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 13:45:28 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
BART CENTRE

[redacted]

From: Vicki LoSasso <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 13:45:37 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Vicki LoSasso
[redacted]

From: Joe Sinn <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 13:45:53 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Joe Sinn

[redacted]

From: Edward Sullivan <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 13:45:56 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

America's founding principles had as their essential foundation the rejection of kings and king-like autocrats and of theocracies and state religions.

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Mr. Edward Sullivan
[redacted]

From: Larry Lewis <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 13:46:07 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Our country was formed under the understanding of separation of church and state. We do not need a cult taking over and specifing everyone who want American rights must pledge alligance to one true warped religion.

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Larry Lewis
[redacted]

From: Roland Romo <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 13:46:07 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Roland Romo

[redacted]

From: Tammy Lettieri <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 13:46:07 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice ANY religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Ms Tammy Lettieri

[redacted]

From: Joan Smiles <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 13:46:07 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Dr. Joan Smiles

[redacted]

From: Sharon Wilensky <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 13:46:09 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

I am a Jewish American and I don't want to be forced into Christian observances and prayers, just as Christians and others would not want to be forced into Muslim prayers and practices, for instance. This country is not a Christian nation but allows equal rights to all.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Sincerely,
Ms. Sharon Wilensky
[redacted]

From: Stephanie Lebman <PII>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <PII>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 13:46:13 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Ms. Stephanie Lebman
PII PII

From: Glenn HAVELOCK <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 13:46:17 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Mr. Glenn HAVELOCK

[redacted]

From: Dina Willner <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 13:46:27 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Ms. Dina Willner

[redacted]

From: Paul Carlos <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 13:46:38 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Mr Paul Carlos
[redacted]

From: Jeremy Kadden <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 13:46:38 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

As a very traditional Jewish American, I write to urge you to ensure that the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives Jewish Americans - and all Americans - the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Jeremy Kadden
[redacted]

From: Thomas Slone <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 13:46:42 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Thomas Slone

[redacted]

From: Richard Boyce <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 13:46:42 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

As a Quaker, I ask that you please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Members of my religion were persecuted by the state in the 1600s, so this issue is quite personal for me. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Mr. Richard Boyce

[redacted]

From: Debra Rehn <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 13:46:46 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Ms. Debra Rehn

[redacted]

From: Robert Fingerman <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 13:46:47 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Mr. Robert Fingerman
[redacted]

From: Ronald Lemmert <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 13:46:57 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

REGARDLESS OF ONE'S RELIGION OR LACK OF RELIGION, ALL ARE WELCOME IN THIS COUNTRY, BECAUSE OUR COUNTRY WAS DESIGNED PARTICULARLY FOR PEOPLE WHO WERE FLEEING FROM RELIGIOUS PERSECUTION IN THE COUNTRIES FROM WHICH THEY CAME. WE CANNOT AND MUST NOT RETURN TO STATE-SPONSORED RELIGIONS FORCED UPON EVERYONE. THAT IS UNCONSTITUTIONAL. SO-CALLED CHRISTIAN NATIONALISM IS A THREAT TO EVERYONE.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Dr. Ronald Lemmert

[redacted]

From: JoAnn McFarland <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 13:46:57 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Our Founding Fathers were absolutely clear on the issue of separation of church and state. They wanted a clear separation to define the boundaries of both, and to ensure the rights of each and every individual to practice the religion of their choice. Not the religion decided on by those in power, forced onto everyone against their will. Let us not be confused or unclear on this issue. The separation of church and state was and is a huge determining factor on how our country became the strong, diverse country it was and could be again, under an administration that understands the actual, clear instructions of our Founding Fathers and abides under them, as it was meant to do.

Sincerely,
Mrs. JoAnn McFarland

[redacted]

From: Corinne Brown <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 13:47:10 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Ms Corinne Brown
[redacted]

From: Patrice Graziani <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 13:47:10 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Patrice Graziani

[redacted]

From: Robert Glorioso <PII>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <PII>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 13:47:10 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

The right of conscience shall not be abridged.

Sincerely,
Dr. Robert Glorioso
PII PII

From: Laurel Hughes <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 13:47:19 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

It's in the Constitution, if that document exists in your world. Separation of Church and State.

Sincerely,
Ms. Laurel Hughes
[redacted]

From: Donald Harland <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 13:47:23 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Mr. Donald Harland
[redacted]

From: Colin Kay <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 13:47:28 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Mr. Colin Kay

[redacted]

From: Lee Ann Innmon <PII>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <PII>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 13:47:35 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Mr and Mrs Lee Ann Innmon
PII PII

From: Caroline Carver <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 13:47:38 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Caroline Carver
[redacted]

From: Dave Frank <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 13:47:38 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Mr. Dave Frank

From: Rebecca Gordon <PII>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <PII>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 13:47:58 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Rebecca Gordon

PII
PII

From: Francie Portnoy <PII>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <PII>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 13:48:12 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Francie Portnoy
PII PII

From: Marcia Mellitz <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 13:48:14 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Ms. Marcia Mellitz
[redacted]

From: Amrita Grace <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 13:48:14 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Ms. Amrita Grace
[redacted]

From: Walter Wright <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 13:48:17 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state is fundamental to our national identity. It gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate. This principle continues to be important!

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

You need to support and protect this vital part of our republic's foundation!

Sincerely,
Walter Wright

[redacted]

From: Arturo Magidin <PII>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <PII>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 13:48:21 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Church-state separation is not a myth; it is part of the constitutional fabric of our nation. To claim otherwise is to attempt to undermine our liberties.

Sincerely,
Dr. Arturo Magidin

PII PII

From: William Fisk <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 13:48:28 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Mr. William Fisk

[redacted]

From: Shela Fisk <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 13:48:28 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans. Church and State separation is not a myth.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Dr. Shela Fisk

[redacted]

From: Greg D <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 13:48:35 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Mr. Greg D

[redacted]

From: Margaret Sharp <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 13:48:51 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Margaret Sharp

[redacted]

From: Gordon Abrams <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 13:48:52 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Mr. Gordon Abrams
[redacted]

From: Judy Moore <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 13:48:58 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Judy Moore

[redacted]

From: Daniel Henderson <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 13:49:13 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

With the 250th Anniversary of our nation upon us, there is nothing more important than the Constitutional principle of non-establishment, otherwise known as the separation of church and state. This is not a myth made up by the courts. It was a deliberate decision made by the founders to both protect religious freedom (all religions) and institute a secular government not beholden to any religion.

It is a two-way street...protecting individual conscience, the free exercise of religion and unencumbering government from control of any religious group.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Mr. Daniel Henderson
[redacted]

From: Debbie Hatcher <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 13:49:13 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Ms. Debbie Hatcher
[redacted]

From: James Griffith <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 13:49:13 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
James Griffith

[redacted]

From: Norma Krasuna <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 13:49:14 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Norma Krasuna

[redacted]

From: Remy Fenster <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 13:49:14 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Remy Fenster

[redacted]

From: Timothy Kautza <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 13:49:19 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Mr. Timothy Kautza
[redacted]

From: John O'Hara <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 13:49:23 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Mr. John O'Hara
[redacted]

From: Jeff Hansen <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 13:49:28 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Jeff Hansen
[redacted]

From: Kathy Lawless <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 13:49:35 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Ms Kathy Lawless

[redacted]

From: M Royce <PII>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <PII>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 13:49:43 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Ms. M Royce

PII PII

From: Donna Plunkett <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 13:49:48 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Ms. Donna Plunkett
[redacted]

From: Jasmine Garcia <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 13:49:51 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

I am a Christian, as was a Religious Affairs Airman when I served in the Air Force Reserve. This issue is very important to me.

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others. I served to protect this right when I was in the Air Force.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Jasmine Garcia

From: Jacqueline DeKoster Thomas <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 13:49:52 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

In reverse, this separation prevents any religious body from controlling our government!

Sincerely,
The Rev. Jacqueline DeKoster Thomas
[redacted]

From: James Pilewski <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 13:50:15 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

This is our country- for  all of us.🇺🇸
Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
James Pilewski
[redacted]

From: David Brown <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 13:50:15 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others. Don't tell me what to believe.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate. Christianity worships white skin.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Mr. David Brown
[redacted]

From: John Humphries <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 13:50:15 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Mr. John Humphries
[redacted]

From: Bridget DePriest <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 13:50:15 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Mrs. Bridget DePriest

[redacted]

From: Susan Peirce <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 13:50:15 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
dr Susan Peirce
[redacted]

From: Wiiliam Shirey <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 13:50:15 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Mr. Wiiliam Shirey
[redacted]

From: Stephanie Seymour <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 13:50:44 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Mrs. Stephanie Seymour
[redacted]

From: "Rev. Max Burg" <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 13:50:44 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Mr. Rev. Max Burg

[redacted]

From: Ilana Krug <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 13:50:51 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans. The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others, and prevents the domination of any religious creed over others. As someone who is in a religious minority, this is especially important to me.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Dr. Ilana Krug

[redacted]

From: Bonnie Margulis <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 13:50:58 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

As a rabbi and expert in Jewish history, I know that the US Bill of Rights guarantee of freedom of religion, free from government interference, has been a cornerstone of Jewish safety and success in the US. This guarantee extends to people of all faiths, and people of no faith. To tear down the 250-year old wall of separation between church and state, and privilege one religious group above all others, not only flies in the face of the Constitution, but upends 250 years of toleration for all faiths. Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Rabbi Bonnie Margulis

[redacted]

From: Alec and Sandy McDougall <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 13:51:15 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Mr. Mrs. Alec and Sandy McDougall

[redacted]

From: Krystal Williams <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 13:51:16 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Krystal Williams
[redacted]

From: Warren Coats <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 13:51:16 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Dr. Warren Coats

[redacted]

From: Anne Kearney <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 13:51:17 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

As a person who attended Christian grade and high schools, I object to government support of any religious organization and I support the right to choose one's religion.

Please do the right thing and do not let YOUR religion color the rights of millions of others the right to choose.

Sincerely,
Ms. Anne Kearney
[redacted]

From: Roberta LaFrance <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 13:51:30 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Ms. Roberta LaFrance
[redacted]

From: Kicab Castaneda-Mendez <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 13:51:30 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Mr. Kicab Castaneda-Mendez

[redacted]

From: Paula Fishman <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 13:51:45 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

I am wrting to ask you to honor the traditions of our nation and the free wll of all its inhabitants to worship or not to worship of their own free will.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs. The recent requirement for bible study in the public schools in Texas violates the principles on whch our nation was founded.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Dr. Paula Fishman

[redacted]

From: David R Smith <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 13:51:48 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Mr. David R Smith
[redacted]

From: Jim Vickrey <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 13:51:58 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

American founders, particularly Jefferson and Madison, believed in separating, not religion, but church, from state. Moral and religious scruples should inform public service and citizenship, but churches qua churches should have no role to play. History proves the wisdom of that separation.

Religious and, especially Christian nationalist, dogma should play not formal role in government, for it amounts to government-sponsored moral authoritarianism. History decries that, too.

Separate churches from government, otherwise you have to choose which churches and that always leaves some out, leading to government determination of approved and unapproved churches. No good has ever come out of such denominational tyranny. Just look at what the Secretary of DOD has recently done in promulgating an approved list of churches for appointing chaplains. It always leads to such.

Sincerely,
Dr. Jim Vickrey

[redacted]

From: Judith Kahle <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 13:52:11 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Having been raised as a Catholic, I value all peoples' beliefs. Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Ms. Judith Kahle
[redacted]

From: PAUL JUERGENS <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 13:52:15 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Dr. PAUL JUERGENS
[redacted]

From: Tim Barrington <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 13:52:15 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Mr. Tim Barrington
[redacted]

From: Nancy LaPorta <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 13:52:19 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Ms. Nancy LaPorta

[redacted]

From: Sandra Morey <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 13:52:39 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others. When I was 7 I transferred in to a new public school in San Diego. My teacher had a pattern for us every morning. We saluted the flag, said the Pledge of Alliagence,
& sang Onward Christian Soldiers. Being Jewish, of course,
I didn't know Onward Christian soldiers and it was quite offensive to me. The teacher handed me a word sheet and told me to have it memorized by the next day. I took it home and my mother was horrified. She was in the principal's office the next day. She also called the ACLU.
I was moved to the back of the class & when it was time to sing music for Christmas I was told not to sing. I love to sing & the Christmas songs which were not meant for me are very beautiful. So I was very sad. The ACLU was organizing a class action suit & my mother joined it on my behalf. Eventually it went to the SCOTUS and we won. That was in 1947.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Ms. Sandra Morey
[redacted]

From: A.J Brown <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 13:52:49 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Mr. A.J Brown

[redacted]

From: Margaret Lyons <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 13:52:49 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Mrs. Margaret Lyons

[redacted]

From: Christopher Flynn <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 13:53:01 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

White Christian nationalism sucks,,,

Sincerely,
Mr. Christopher Flynn

[redacted]

From: Rick Alexander <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 13:53:16 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Rick Alexander

[redacted]

From: Jonah Cagley <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 13:53:17 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Jonah Cagley

[redacted]

From: Charles Dineen <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 13:53:29 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Mr. Charles Dineen
[redacted]

From: Robert Oshel <PII>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <PII>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 13:53:40 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

I was appalled by the Religious Liberty Commission's final report because it fails to recognize the crucial role of church-state separation in protecting the religious freedom of all religions from government interference and the freedom of all Americans from imposition of by the government of any particular religious belief or religious beliefs in general.

Quite frankly, I have never heard of anything more unAmerican than any effort to denigrate separation of church and state.

We need both freedom of religion and, for nonbelievers, freedom from religion. We don't need efforts of religions to impose their beliefs on the government or efforts by government to impose religious beliefs on Americans. Such efforts corrupt both religion and government and are contrary to our basic liberty and freedom.

It is truly sad that a "Religious Liberty Commission" does not support liberty for everyone to have (or not have) their own religious beliefs by keeping religion out of government and government out of religion.

Sincerely,
Robert Oshel

PII
PII

From: Dan Nemes <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 13:53:49 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Dan Nemes

[redacted]

From: Chris Oxford <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 13:53:50 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Mrs. Chris Oxford
[redacted]

From: Alan Bone <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 13:53:50 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Alan Bone

[redacted]

From: David Troiano <PII>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <PII>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 13:53:51 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

As a secular humanist I am not interested in any religion but am an American-born citizen who appreciates the level of freedom in our country with regard to religion and belief systems.

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Sincerely,
David Troiano

PII
PII

From: Michael Shamamian <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 13:54:01 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Michael Shamamian

[redacted]

From: Nathan Hoekstra <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 13:54:15 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Nathan Hoekstra
[redacted]

From: Robert Parris <PII>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <PII>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 13:54:15 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Dr Robert Parris

PII
PII

From: ann gilson <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 13:54:16 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
ann gilson

[redacted]

From: Bruce Baker <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 13:54:17 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Mr Bruce Baker
[redacted]

From: Jim Melton <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 13:54:27 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Mr. Jim Melton
[redacted]

From: Summer Wagenfuhr <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 13:54:36 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

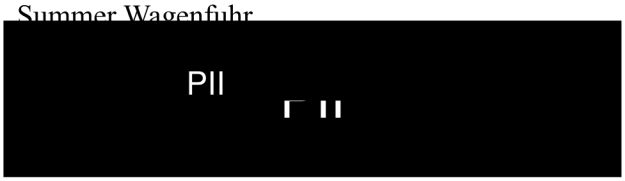
Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.



Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Summer Wagenfuhr

From: Richard Peppin <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 13:54:50 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Richard Peppin

[redacted]

From: LUANNE HEACOCK <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 13:54:50 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
LUANNE HEACOCK
[redacted]

From: franklin crabtree <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 13:54:51 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
mr franklin crabtree
[redacted]

From: "S.M. Cohen" <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 13:54:52 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
S.M. Cohen

[redacted]

From: Robert Allen <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 13:54:52 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Mr. Robert Allen

[redacted]

From: Mark Naeser <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 13:55:03 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Mr. Mark Naeser

[redacted]

From: Joseph Getty <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 13:55:03 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

I am a 78-year-old veteran. I am also a Christian.

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Joseph Getty

[redacted]

From: Christina Tomiyama <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 13:55:17 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

I am deeply concerned about religious liberty and the strict separation of church and state, especially as we approach our 250th anniversary. Please make sure that Religious Liberty Commission's final report how important church-state separation is to the freedom of our country.

The United States of America is not a "Christian nation" any more than it is a Buddhist nation or a Hindu or Muslim nation. Forcing students to pray in schools, requiring taxpayers to fund projects that benefit only certain religions, suing pastors who deliver politically unwelcome messages, and disrespecting persons exercising their religious freedom in ways different from majority beliefs all create social disharmony and are Constitutionally unacceptable.

Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Sincerely,
Christina Tomiyama

[redacted]

From: Carlos Nunez <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 13:55:17 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Mr. Carlos Nunez
[redacted]

From: Elaine McNeill <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 13:55:17 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Separation of church and state is fundamental to our constitution and our liberty.

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

No commission has the right to impose its beliefs on the American electorate!

Sincerely,
Elaine McNeill

[redacted]

From: Barbara Trought <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 13:55:29 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Separation of church and state is equally important to religious freedom and to self-government. We Americans can celebrate both religious freedom and government of the people, by the people, and for the people.

History and current events underscore the significance of separation. One of the reasons President Trump cites for the on-going war with Iran is that the regime--acting out of religious tenets--subjugates its citizens. Iranians are not free.

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Mrs. Barbara Trought
[redacted]

From: Doug Helliesen <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 13:55:36 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Mr. Doug Helliesen

[redacted]

From: Steve Schatz <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 13:56:16 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Steve Schatz
[redacted]

From: Mark Bayer <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 13:56:31 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Mark Bayer

[redacted]

From: P Nunez <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 13:56:43 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
P Nunez

[redacted]

From: Jarrett Cloud <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 13:56:52 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Mr. Jarrett Cloud
[redacted]

From: Gerald Kretmar <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 13:56:52 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Mr. Gerald Kretmar
[redacted]

From: Matthew Ramsaywack <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 13:56:53 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Mr. Matthew Ramsaywack

[redacted]

From: Dolores Colunga-Stawitz <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 13:56:55 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Mrs Dolores Colunga-Stawitz

[redacted]

From: Joseph Luke <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 13:57:01 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Mr. Joseph Luke
[redacted]

From: Thomas Marlowe <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 13:57:17 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Mr Thomas Marlowe

[redacted]

From: John Parliman <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 13:57:17 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
John Parliman

[redacted]

From: Karen Wilson <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 13:57:32 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Dr. Karen Wilson
[redacted]

From: STEVEN Beyer <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 13:57:36 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state, as is delineated in the first clause of the First Amendment of the Constitution gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate and recognized the evil brought about with an official state religion as in the Church of England during our colonial period and in modern Islamic states.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs. Religious education is the within the purview of and is the responsibility of, if it desired, the parents of the child.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Mr. STEVEN Beyer
[redacted]

From: Bruce Schuturm <PII>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <PII>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 13:57:40 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders, who were familiar with the devastating effects of government and religion as one, recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether or not they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Mr. Bruce Schuturm

PII PII

From: Nicholas Jevric <PII>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <PII>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 13:58:02 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Dr Nicholas Jevric

PII
PII

From: Lisa Keim <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 13:58:02 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

I am a 61 year old American. Born, raised and educated in America. We studied The Constitution. Separation of church and state is older than I am.

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Mrs. Lisa Keim

[redacted]

From: Anne Larsen <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 13:58:03 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Church-state separation is one of the only things keeping this country from crumbling

Sincerely,
Anne Larsen

[redacted]

From: Elizabeth Ryan <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 13:58:03 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Elizabeth Ryan
[redacted]

From: Michele Reynolds <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 13:58:03 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Ms. Michele Reynolds

[redacted]

From: Al Blazo <PII>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <PII>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 13:58:18 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Al Blazo

PII PII

From: Dorothy Carlson <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 13:58:18 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Ms Dorothy Carlson
[redacted]

From: Norman Olshansky <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 13:58:19 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

While your Commission has focused on the free exercise of religion, your report seems to avoid addressing government entanglement with religion. I am very concerned that your recommendations are focused on one area of Christianity and poses problems for those who do not practice or are part of that faith group

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Norman Olshansky
[redacted]

From: Barbara Forrest <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 13:58:40 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Barbara Forrest

[redacted]

From: Fred Leonard <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 13:58:53 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Fred Leonard
[redacted]

From: Lezlie Ringland <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 13:59:03 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Mrs. Lezlie Ringland

[redacted]

From: Amanda Honigfort <PII>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <PII>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 13:59:03 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Amanda Honigfort

PII PII

From: Deborah Davis <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 13:59:04 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Ms. Deborah Davis

[redacted]

From: Joseph Lawson <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 13:59:04 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Dr. Joseph Lawson

[redacted]

From: Carol Reichert <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 13:59:07 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Ms. Carol Reichert
[redacted]

From: Shirley Hansen <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 13:59:18 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Mrs. Shirley Hansen
[redacted]

From: Raymond Smith <PII>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <PII>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 13:59:18 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

The foundation of our Country is freedom of and from religion. Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Dr. Raymond Smith

PII PII

From: Francisco Velez <PII>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <PII>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 13:59:18 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Mr. Francisco Velez

PII
PII

From: Melissa Earnest <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 13:59:24 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from government intrusion, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Please safeguard our liberties and continue to keep the American citizen first as you move forward.

Sincerely,
Dr. Melissa Earnest
[redacted]

From: Deborah Zdobinski <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 13:59:27 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Ms. Deborah Zdobinski
[redacted]

From: Ann-Marie Christopher <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 13:59:36 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Ann-Marie Christopher
[redacted]

From: STEVEN MAYO <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 13:59:41 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
STEVEN MAYO
[redacted]

From: Raye Robertson <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 13:59:53 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

As the 10th great-granddaughter of a woman named Mary Parker who was wrongly hanged by an out of control religious establishment in colonial Salem, MA, this issue of church-state separation is truly personal. Conflating state and religious power was a horrendous reality in pre-Colonial America that should NEVER be repeated. The Freedom of Religion is NOT the freedom to impose one viewpoint or belief system on an entire nation. The arrogance of such an effort is simply breathtaking and totally unacceptable. This nation is for ALL Americans, no matter their religious views or affiliations and despite twisted efforts to redefine our original national purpose, we are meant to be a "Republic...if we can keep it," NOT a theocratic dictatorship.

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Ms. Raye Robertson
[redacted]

From: Luis Vega <PII>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <PII>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 14:00:04 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Mr. Luis Vega
PII PII

From: Marina Diaz <PII>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <PII>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 14:00:04 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Ms. Marina Diaz

PII PII

From: Larry Brown <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 14:00:41 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Larry Brown
[redacted]

From: Shiloh Keele <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 14:00:41 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

When you say you support religious freedom, I have to ask: "Religious freedom for whom?" For everybody, or for a few specific branches of Christianity? Because it is an atheist parent's right to want their child to grow up without dogma.

Sincerely,
Shiloh Keele
[redacted]

From: Perseus Munshi <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 14:00:42 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Perseus Munshi

[redacted]

From: Teresia LaFleur <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 14:00:52 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Ms. Teresia LaFleur
[redacted]

From: Edwin Kelly <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 14:01:06 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer and teaching of bible stories that are strictly Christian out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Mr. Edwin Kelly
[redacted]

From: Madeline Helbraun <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 14:01:13 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Madeline Helbraun
[redacted]

From: Janet Peschel Kowal <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 14:01:18 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Mrs. Janet Peschel Kowal
[redacted]

From: Diana Krantz <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 14:01:22 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Diana Krantz
[redacted]

From: Laura Mazar <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 14:01:22 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Mrs. Laura Mazar

[redacted]

From: William Insley <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 14:01:28 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Mr. William Insley
[redacted]

From: Steve Dorage <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 14:01:36 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Steve Dorage
[redacted]

From: Barbara Meislin <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 14:01:49 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Barbara Meislin

[redacted]

From: Evelyn Badger <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 14:01:53 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Ms. Evelyn Badger

[redacted]

From: Elaine Logsdon <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 14:02:02 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Ms. Elaine Logsdon

[redacted]

From: "Charlene V. Maker" <PII>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <PII>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 14:02:03 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Ms. Charlene V. Maker

PII PII

From: Nancy Moore <PII>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <PII>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 14:02:03 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Ms. Nancy Moore
PII PII

From: Morton Friedlander <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 14:02:22 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Morton Friedlander

[redacted]

From: Denny Payne <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 14:02:40 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Church-state separation is not at all a “myth,” it is a foundational principle of the United States as attested in many written documents from the Founding Fathers, including Thomas Jefferson and John Adams.

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission’s final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don’t harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Denny Payne

[redacted]

From: Ann Bein <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 14:02:40 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Ms. Ann Bein

[redacted]

From: David Ferguson <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 14:02:48 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Reverend David Ferguson
[redacted]

From: "C.L. MOORE" <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 14:02:51 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

I am a life-long member of the United Methodist Church. I am grateful that in the United States I am free to follow my faith without any outside influence by the government. Thus, separation of church and state is of critical importance to me.

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
C.L. MOORE
[redacted]

From: Janet Rountree <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 14:02:53 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Ms. Janet Rountree
[redacted]

From: Lindsay Mugglestone <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 14:03:04 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Ms. Lindsay Mugglestone

[redacted]

From: Michael Maxson <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 14:03:13 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Mr. Michael Maxson
[redacted]

From: Michael Bernard <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 14:03:13 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Mr. Michael Bernard

[redacted]

From: Connie Marking <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 14:03:19 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

I attended a wonderful Catholic high school and received an excellent education. A new teacher was hired who was Mormon, and his daughter became my classmate. I saw first-hand how intimidating and suffocating our Catholic environment felt for someone with different beliefs in God. She felt like she did not fit in and was not accepted, although her classmates and teachers never did anything overtly (or even consciously) to make her feel that way. It was just the way it was: we were all Catholic, and she was not. She was different. She was somehow less than us, defective, for her differing beliefs, even though we all worshipped the same God.

Now imagine if the Religious Liberty Commission decides that church and state are one and the same, with no separation. The Commission may not endorse one faith over another, but Christian Protestants believe they are the one, true faith, and that it is their duty and their mission to bring everyone to their God - to save them - using any means available, including violence if necessary.

Without our treasured separation of Church and State, more than half of the citizens of our great country will be told that they are less than others, that they are somehow defective citizens, that they must pretend to convert or risk economic and social disaster. This is not freedom of religion! This is economic and social and legal coercion of the majority by a minority of zealots, empowered by non-believers looking to profit from this change.

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Connie Marking

[redacted]

From: Barbara Meislin <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 14:03:23 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate. Without separation of Church and state our Democrat is GONE.

Sincerely,
Barbara Meislin

[redacted]

From: Carol Watts <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 14:03:29 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Carol Watts

[redacted]

From: Sandra Weston <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 14:03:30 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Mrs. Sandra Weston

[redacted]

From: Deirdre Pulgram-Arthen <PII>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <PII>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 14:03:48 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

There is no one true faith for the United States of America.

Freedom of religion for all is one of the founding principles of this country. It is crucial that we protect that religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. Church-state separation, as listed in the first amendment, ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another.

Our democratic government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion. Schools must be welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs, without the imposition of coercive prayer or single-faith readings in the classrooms. Tax dollars must be spent on the good of all, not on funding religion or religious institutions.

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

Sincerely,
Rev Deirdre Pulgram-Arthen
PII PII

From: Rebekah Dandeneau <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 14:03:49 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Mrs. Rebekah Dandeneau

[redacted]

From: Carol Vigil <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 14:04:09 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Carol Vigil
[redacted]

From: Steven Uyenishi <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 14:04:18 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Mr. Steven Uyenishi

[redacted]

From: Victoria Hilkevitch <PII>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <PII>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 14:04:23 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Dr. Victoria Hilkevitch

PII PII

From: Kevin Ewing <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 14:04:42 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Mr. Kevin Ewing

[redacted]

From: Melissa Lawrence <PII>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <PII>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 14:04:49 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Thank you for your time and consideration.

Be well, and stay safe this holiday weekend.

Sincerely,
Ms. Melissa Lawrence

PII PII

From: Rob Sauer <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 14:04:50 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Mr. Rob Sauer
[redacted]

From: Jan Emerson <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 14:04:51 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

It's in the Constitution--all religions are protected. The government is not a church. It's there to protect all of us and allow us to follow our own beliefs.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Ms. Jan Emerson

[redacted]

From: Lynda Kolesar <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 14:05:07 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Mrs. Lynda Kolesar

[redacted]

From: Jann Jasper <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 14:05:07 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

It is urgent that the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others. And it's in the constitution.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Jann Jasper

[redacted]

From: Pamela Ramirez <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 14:05:08 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

i strongly believe all of the above as did the founders.

Sincerely,
Pamela Ramirez

[redacted]

From: Carol Ryan Ertz <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 14:05:09 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans. This is an important tenant of our democracy and must be preserved.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Carol Ryan Ertz

[redacted]

From: P Joseph Brake <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 14:05:10 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
P Joseph Brake

[redacted]

From: Nancy Cowger <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 14:05:19 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Ms. Nancy Cowger

[redacted]

From: Bethany Foley <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 14:06:14 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

I do not intend to offend anyone. But the truth is likely to be offensive. Please forgive that.

I have spent most of my life trying to escape the sort of Christian nationalism that is currently taking hold of the government. There are plenty of Christians who I deeply respect and honor. My father was one of them although he gave money to the machine that is currently destroying the country.

I can disagree with someone and still respect and honor that person. Can you?

I was promised freedom of religion.

Every class on civics that I ever had mentioned that.

When I was in non-Christian schools, I would be asked my religion on forms. I would write "none" because I knew that if I said what my religion was I would be persecuted endlessly. I'm sure it would have all been very official and polite. Ya know, for my own good.

I want freedom of religion. Real freedom of religion.

Most especially, please give me more freedom, not less, from the Christian nationalists. Please do not take away the few freedoms that I have spent my life fighting for.

I do not consider their form of Christianity to be moral in any way shape form or fashion. It is about control.

And, indeed, these people are the reason that I chose not to have children.

Because of the intrusiveness of their absolute hegemony, I would not have been able to raise children without them being harmed.

What more children? Respect everyone. Even the people who don't worship in the way you approve. Even the people who don't worship at all.

I believe people have every right to practice any religion they desire, even the one that is terrifying me so much right now. I do not hold it against anyone as long as that person is not trying to hurt me or convert me.

I also agree with everything else that Americans united says below.

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission’s final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don’t harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Rev. Bethany Foley

PII PII

From: David Gray <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 14:06:20 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Dr. David Gray

[redacted]

From: Connie Raper <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 14:06:27 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Ms Connie Raper
[redacted]

From: dianne post <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 14:06:30 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Ms. dianne post
[redacted]

From: KIMBERLY HICKS <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 14:06:32 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
KIMBERLY HICKS
[redacted]

From: Diana Ward <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 14:06:47 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Ms. Diana Ward
[redacted]

From: Stephanie Campbell <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 14:07:03 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Ms. Stephanie Campbell
[redacted]

From: Robert Jacobson <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 14:07:13 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Mr Robert Jacobson

[redacted]

From: Christine Dillon-Puchalsky <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 14:07:27 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Ms. Christine Dillon-Puchalsky

[redacted]

From: louisa dyer <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 14:08:02 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Ms. louisa dyer

[redacted]

From: Susan Schrader <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 14:08:02 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Dr. Susan Schrader
[redacted]

From: Marc And Alice Marc Marc And Alice Imlay <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 14:08:02 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Dr. Marc And Alice Marc Marc And Alice Imlay

[redacted]

From: Brittney Ryder <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 14:08:13 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Ms. Brittney Ryder

[redacted]

From: Jeffrey Phillips <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 14:08:22 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

As a religious minority, seperation of church and state is an important protection for those who's rights can be violated by the majority.

I have always strongly believed that the State should have no right to violate our personal freedoms of religion and our personal beliefs as to how we choose to live a lawful life.

Majority rule typically chooses to divide, not unite. The founders' vision was to have the same rights for every citizen of the USA. We should aspire to be Americans first, rather than our color, creed, or socioeconomic status. As the wealthiest country on earth, we have the wherewithal to ensure that all Americans deserve to take advantage of their opportunities for the pursuit of a dignified life.

Sincerely,
Mr. Jeffrey Phillips

[redacted]

From: Anthony Straka <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 14:08:25 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Mr. Anthony Straka

[redacted]

From: Pat Richter <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 14:08:29 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Ms Pat Richter
[redacted]

From: Jim Neal <PII>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <PII>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 14:08:35 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Mr. Jim Neal

PII
PII

From: Don Rowlett <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 14:08:43 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Mr. Don Rowlett
[redacted]

From: Robert Franz <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 14:08:43 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

I was drafted, and forced to attend chapel that was not of my choosing. For one to select their own religious beliefs without government interference or preference is very important to me. Government needs to stay out of religion through the separation of church and State.

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Mr Robert Franz
[redacted]

From: Jonathan Gottlieb <PII>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <PII>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 14:08:45 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Mr. Jonathan Gottlieb
PII PII

From: Susan Clarke-Mahoney <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 14:08:48 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Ms. Susan Clarke-Mahoney
[redacted]

From: John Perry <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 14:09:02 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Mr. John Perry

[redacted]

From: michael hinshaw <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 14:09:22 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others. AND as long as we aren't imposing our religion on others, such as how some Muslim supremacists attempt to impose Islamic religious sahariah law on non-Muslims in the Dearborn, Michigan area. Unlike the claims to the contrary, I know that this is done, because they have tried to impose the dhimna portion of sharia law on me and force a dhimmi status on me.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Mr. michael hinshaw
[redacted]

From: Alii Bek <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 14:09:35 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Ms. Alii Bek
[redacted]

From: K G <PII>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <PII>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 14:09:35 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Dr K G

PII PII

From: Dan Jacobson <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 14:09:46 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Dan Jacobson

[redacted]

From: Maria Asteinza <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 14:11:13 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Maria Asteinza
[redacted]

From: Katy Ruckdeschel <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 14:11:18 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Dr. Katy Ruckdeschel

[redacted]

From: Debbie Westlake <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 14:11:20 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Ms. Debbie Westlake
[redacted]

From: John Kirby <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 14:11:20 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Mr. John Kirby

[redacted]

From: Randy Sharp <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 14:12:04 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Randy Sharp
[redacted]

From: Martin Williams <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 14:12:04 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Mr. Martin Williams
[redacted]

From: Mary Zahler <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 14:12:05 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Mrs. Mary Zahler

[redacted]

From: Jeff Baysinger <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 14:12:46 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Jeff Baysinger

[redacted]

From: Carolyn Dinneen <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 14:12:54 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Ms Carolyn Dinneen
[redacted]

From: Rachael Stauffer <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 14:12:54 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Imposing one religion over others is not American. Only authoritarian regimes do that.

Sincerely,
MS Rachael Stauffer

[redacted]

From: James Lampert <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 14:13:03 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

The father of Church-State Separation in North America was a man named Roger Williams.

The Reverend Roger Williams, who in 1636 founded the colony that would become known as "Rhode Island and providence Plantations, SPECIFICALLY as a place where people of ALL faith traditions (and of no faith tradition at all) would be welcome, but NO religion would have any official standing.

Church-State Separation is made explicit in the Establishment and Free Exercise clauses of the First Amendment. But it did not originate there. It goes back to Williams, and it goes back to groups like the Anabaptist Separatists in Plymouth, the Puritans in Massachusetts Bay, and the Quakers in Pennsylvania.

Sincerely,
James Lampert

[redacted]

From: Sean McPhilamy <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 14:13:04 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all of our fellow Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion, change to a different religion or to participate in no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone — religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families — not government officials — can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone. And churches should not be tax-exempt.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Mr. Sean McPhilamy
[redacted]

From: Christine Allen <PII>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <PII>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 14:13:11 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Christine Allen

PII
PII

From: Natalie Clark <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 14:13:18 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Natalie Clark
[redacted]

From: Jane Russell <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 14:13:38 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Mrs. Jane Russell

[redacted]

From: Mark Laubach <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 14:13:46 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

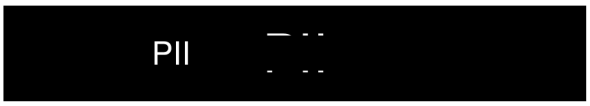
The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.



Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

I was born 65 years ago into a very religious family. My late father and his two older brothers (also deceased) were all Pastors in the Evangelical Lutheran Church in America. My faith has been and continues to be a central driving force in my life and work. I started playing the piano and organ at age three, and I have served as a church musician for most of my life. I know well how important a role religious faith can play in one's life. But I also know, through the experience of many friends and even in my own life experiences, how religion can cause division, hatred, bigotry, and violence, particularly against those whose faith is considered to be a "minority" belief, as well as against those who do not subscribe to ANY religious beliefs. I have seen firsthand how people can be victimized, ostracized, belittled, hated, harmed, or even killed because of their beliefs or the lack thereof. The United States of America was founded on the principals of religious liberty, tolerance, and diversity. Those who would seek to authorize a "national religion" are in defiance of our Constitution, which clearly states that "The civil rights of none shall be abridged on account of religious belief or worship, nor shall any national religion be established, nor shall the full and equal rights of conscience be in any manner, or on any pretext, infringed." If we dare to defy or change this, we risk further division and violence among our citizens at a time when we are already deeply divided and conflicted by hatred and bigotry.

I hope and pray that you will continue to respect and subscribe to these indispensable principals as outlined in our Constitution!

Sincerely,
Mr. Mark Laubach

PII

From: Shirley Ranz <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 14:13:54 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Shirley Ranz
[redacted]

From: Judith Faust <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 14:14:05 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

One of the major reasons people emigrated here from Europe  was to find religious freedom - remember the Puritans, and the French Huguenots? They came here to find the freedom to worship as their consciences told them to do. That is why our founding fathers, including Thomas Jefferson in a letter describing the First Amendment to the Constitution, talked about building a wall between the church and the State.

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Judith Faust

[redacted]

From: Eileen Prefontaine <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 14:14:05 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Eileen Prefontaine
[redacted]

From: Marian Gamble <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 14:14:12 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Ms. Marian Gamble

[redacted]

From: Josephine Rabb <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 14:14:46 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Dr Josephine Rabb
[redacted]

From: Gino Czaster <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 14:15:12 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Mr. Gino Czaster
[redacted]

From: Brenda Smith <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 14:15:12 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

SO MANY RELIGIONS!!! WHICH ONE ARE YOU GOING TO REQUIRE US TO FOLLOW?
First and most basic is the fact that the Supreme Court is the ultimate interpreter of federal constitutional law. This means that while the term "separation of Church and State" may never appear in the constitution itself, the Court ruling in the case of Everson v. Board of Education stated "the clause against establishment of religion by law was intended to erect 'a wall of separation between Church and State.'"

A quarter century later, the case of Lemon v. Kurtzman further defined this separation when it established the Lemon Test to determine if a law violates the establishment clause of the First Amendment. Every ruling since has confirmed that, in the view of the highest court in the land the Constitution created a separation of church and state.

Having said that, the separation of church and state is hardly the first unwritten concept that is protected by the constitution.

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Mx. Brenda Smith
[redacted]

From: Susanna Levin <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 14:15:27 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Ms. Susanna Levin
[redacted]

From: Anthony Ricciardi <PII>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <PII>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 14:15:29 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Mr. Anthony Ricciardi

PII
PII

From: Nanette Gilligan <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 14:15:47 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Miss Nanette Gilligan
[redacted]

From: Beverly Ann Conroy <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 14:15:47 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Mrs. Beverly Ann Conroy
[redacted]

From: Bruce Harshberger <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 14:15:47 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Our Founders looked across the water to Europe, where their forbears came from, for many reasons including the freedom to worship as they chose, and concluded an established religion is deadly. When people fight over religion they will kill--because "God told them to do it". My Harshberger ancestors were persecuted in Switzerland (fingers cut off, tongues cut out) and The Palatinate along the Rhine River, and were offered sanctuary in Pennsylvania by the UK's William Penn himself. They jumped at it.

When we rejected King George III we also rejected his role as  head of the Church of England and any semblance of it in our new American government.

I am so thankful for "No Established Religion!"
--Bruce Harshberger

Sincerely,
Mr. Bruce Harshberger
[redacted]

From: Carolina Alvarez <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 14:15:47 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

This country was founded by many freeing religious persecution. Ensuring the separation of church and state is one of the main ways that no religion (especially one deemed by the government to be the "best" or "right" religion) is above any other.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Sincerely,
Carolina Alvarez

[redacted]

From: cindy hadden <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 14:16:12 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

This is serious and as the Repub Party has been chipping more away from our wall for decades! Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Ms. cindy hadden

[redacted]

From: Terry Hatch <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 14:16:13 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Our Founders and the American people value religion but do not want it in the Government and wish respect for all religions. Your religious nationalism is driven by a desire for power, exclusion, flawed theology and empire religion but not by the Gospels.

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Dr. Terry Hatch

[redacted]

From: Scott Eden <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 14:17:19 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Dr. Scott Eden
[redacted]

From: Adam Jenkins <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 14:17:19 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans. It is the foundation of our nation.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Adam Jenkins
[redacted]

From: Amy Rafalow <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 14:17:28 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Separation of Chirch and State is a founding principle of our country. The Our country was not founded as a Christian nation! The Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Ms Amy Rafalow

[redacted]

From: N Huether <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 14:17:29 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
N Huether

[redacted]

From: Maureen O'Neill <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 14:17:49 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Ms. Maureen O'Neill
[redacted]

From: Adam Versenyi <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 14:18:19 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

As someone not associated with any religious institution and a cultural Jew I write to urge you to please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans. I have as much right to my lack of any religious doctrine as those who fervently believe.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Adam Versenyi

[redacted]

From: Margaret Cobb <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 14:18:21 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Mrs. Margaret Cobb
[redacted]

From: Ruth Keitz <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 14:18:31 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Dr. Ruth Keitz
[redacted]

From: Linda Mellen <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 14:18:50 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Mrs. Linda Mellen

[redacted]

From: Joanne Puliatti <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 14:18:50 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Ms. Joanne Puliatti
[redacted]

From: David Reynoso <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 14:18:50 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Don David Reynoso

[redacted]

From: Rashid Patch <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 14:18:51 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

The individuals who signed the Declaration of Independence, and ratified our Constitution, were of many denominations and faiths: Anglican, Lutheran, Methodist, Presbyterian, Quaker, Catholic, Jew, Deists, atheists – and were extremely aware that sectarian conflicts, when given state authority, had resulted in many centuries of appealing conflict in Europe.

They wrote those documents, and founded our nation, with the explicit intention that there be an absolute wall of separation between church and state, with no state support or authorization for any faith, sect, or denomination.

The people of the 13 Colonies fought a Revolution for those principles, with the full expectation that they would be preserved; and many hundreds of thousands of our nations defenders, over two and a half centuries, have given their lives to preserver and defend those principles.

To be consistent with our Founder's intentions, it is a grave moral obligation that the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the essential, vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion, or any interpretation of religion, or no religion at all, as long as we don't cause harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Imam Rashid Patch
[redacted]

From: Marcia Strumwater <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 14:19:04 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Ms. Marcia Strumwater

[redacted]

From: Holly Utz <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 14:19:20 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Ms. Holly Utz

[redacted]

From: Mary Ann Viveros <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 14:19:50 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Mary Ann Viveros
[redacted]

From: Jeffery Pecoraro <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 14:20:31 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects, in clear and principled terms, the indispensable role that church–state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans—particularly in public education, where conscience and equal treatment are most vulnerable.

This principle is not modern—it is foundational. Thomas Jefferson described "a wall of separation between Church & State," reflecting a constitutional design meant to protect both faith and government from entanglement. James Madison wrote in his Memorial and Remonstrance that religion "must be left to the conviction and conscience of every man," underscoring that belief is not within the authority of civil government.

In public schools, that design is especially critical. Because attendance is compulsory and students are a captive audience, neutrality is the only reliable safeguard against coercion. Church–state separation ensures that students and families—not government officials—decide matters of faith and religious education. It preserves the boundary that keeps the state from dictating conscience while protecting the integrity of public education.

The Founders understood that religious liberty requires limits on government power. Jefferson, in the Virginia Statute for Religious Freedom, declared that "all men shall be free to profess, and by argument to maintain, their opinions in matters of religion," and warned that compelling support for religious practice is "sinful and tyrannical." In schools, that means the government may not sponsor, mandate, or impose religious activity, especially where such action burdens minority beliefs.

Church–state separation protects minority beliefs by preventing public schools from becoming instruments of majoritarian religion. Without it, students from smaller faith traditions—or no faith tradition—would face pressure to conform or stand apart. Madison cautioned that government involvement in religion risks "establishing a precedent which may be a source of danger to the equal rights of every citizen," a warning that applies directly to the school setting.

In practice, schools must remain neutral: they may teach about religion, but not endorse it; facilitate student expression, but not compel it. Jefferson's "wall" is what allows a student to pray privately or refrain entirely without state interference or institutional influence.

This neutrality is what makes public schools inclusive. When officials lead prayer or embed religious exercises in school programming, minority students are placed in the position of outsider status. Even subtle endorsement creates pressure in a compulsory environment. The result is not freedom—it is coercion by association.

Church–state separation also protects taxpayers and families from being compelled to fund religious activity through public education. Public schools exist for shared civic purposes; using them to advance religious practice violates the Founders' commitment to conscience-based liberty rather than government-imposed belief.

Finally, this principle ensures equal treatment under the law. The government's obligation is to serve all students fairly, regardless of belief or nonbelief. Neutrality preserves unity, prevents discrimination, and affirms that no conscience is worth more—or less—than another.

In sum, church–state separation is not an obstacle to religious freedom—it is its guarantor. It protects minority beliefs, prevents coercion, and ensures public schools remain places where all students are free to think, learn, and believe without government-imposed influence.

Sincerely,
Rev. Jeffery Pecoraro

[redacted]

From: John Newsom <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 14:20:48 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

There is a reason why the nation's founders built this separation. And we have seen in real time the deleterious effects of theocracy in other countries.

Sincerely,
John Newsom

[redacted]

From: Ron Welch <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 14:20:55 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Mr. Ron Welch

[redacted]

From: Paul Hutchinson <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 14:21:04 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Paul Hutchinson

[redacted]

From: Janice Carlson <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 14:21:20 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Ms. Janice Carlson
[redacted]

From: Roslyn Block <PII>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <PII>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 14:21:48 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Roslyn Block

PII
PII

From: Alena Jorgensen <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 14:21:55 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Alena Jorgensen

[redacted]

From: Sue Donaldson <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 14:22:05 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Breaching the wall between church and state could give us Iran. Or ancient Rome, where emporers could be voted by the senate to be worshipped as gods. Or Massachusetts in 1659, where they executed Quakers for--being Quakers.

Please red your history and learn about why the first amendment was adopted, and why the founders specifically avoided declaring that the US was a Christian nation (or Buddist, for that matter.

Church and state must be separate. The law can tell me what I can and can't do, but it must not tell me what I can believe.

Sincerely,
Dr. Sue Donaldson

[redacted]

From: Don McKenzie <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 14:22:20 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Mr. Don McKenzie
[redacted]

From: Rachel Oliver <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 14:22:20 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Rachel Oliver

[redacted]

From: Paul Markillie <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 14:22:20 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Mr. Paul Markillie

[redacted]

From: Marilyn Kneeland <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 14:22:20 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Ms. Marilyn Kneeland

[redacted]

From: Joan loughran <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 14:22:20 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Church-state separation is guaranteed in the first amendment in the anti-establishment clause. It is not a myth. The real myth is that this country was founded as a christian nation.

Sincerely,
Joan loughran

[redacted]

From: Wayne Coffey <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 14:22:20 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

I am a practicing Christian, but I definitely believe in a separation of church and state

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Mr. Wayne Coffey

[redacted]

From: George Avrunin <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 14:22:38 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Mr. George Avrunin
[redacted]

From: Gayla Cremin <PII>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <PII>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 14:22:50 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Mrs. Gayla Cremin

PII PII

From: Marilyn Kneeland <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 14:22:50 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Ms. Marilyn Kneeland
[redacted]

From: Jeanne Hartman <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 14:22:55 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Jeanne Hartman

[redacted]

From: arnold krupat <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 14:23:02 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Dr. arnold krupat

[redacted]

From: Amy Steinberg <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 14:23:05 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Mx Amy Steinberg
[redacted]

From: Robert Nehmad <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 14:23:20 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Mr. Robert Nehmad

[redacted]

From: Deborah Tracy- Proulx <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 14:23:55 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Ms Deborah Tracy- Proulx
[redacted]

From: Kathleen Smith <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 14:24:05 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Kathleen Smith
[redacted]

From: Suzanne Schaem <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 14:24:07 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Suzanne Schaem

[redacted]

From: Ruth Clifford <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 14:24:20 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Ms. Ruth Clifford
[redacted]

From: Ellen Segal <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 14:25:17 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Mrs. Ellen Segal

[redacted]

From: Sarah-Hope Parmeter <PII>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <PII>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 14:25:17 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

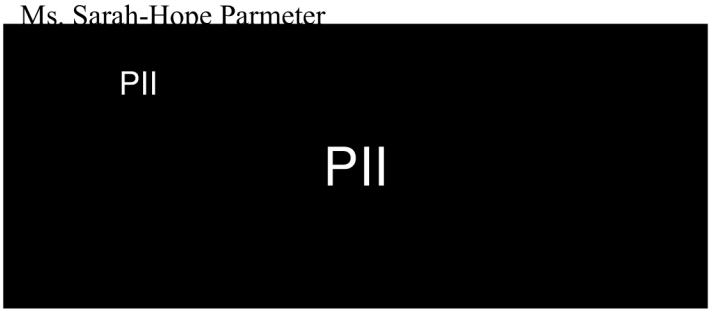
Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.



Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Ms. Sarah-Hope Parmeter

From: David R Smith <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 14:25:17 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
David R Smith

[redacted]

From: Anthony Vena <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 14:25:34 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Anthony Vena
[redacted]

From: Roseanne P <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 14:25:38 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

The role of theReligious Liberty Commission's final report is to affirm the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.
Not just christian nationalists

The separation of church and state gives us as Americans the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't use our chosen religion as an excuse to harm others. Ex. Discriminating against LGBQT community based on religious beliefs

Church-state separation ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation is in our constitution & guarantees religious organizations are free from political control and politics are free from religious control

Our constitution guarantees & protects Church-state separation including in our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs. To say this country is not founded on Church-state separation is a falsehood introduced by right wing activists with no love for this country

I will fight as a taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation government is the only way to serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Ms. Roseanne P

[redacted]

From: Nancy Yuen <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 14:25:58 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report clearly states the fundamental role of church-state separation in protecting the religious freedom of all Americans.

This separation provides all the right to practice any or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

State-church separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government will not impose any religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another or religion over atheism. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are kept separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education, which should always take place outside of public institutions.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference. It also protects the State from becoming a vessel through which religious dogma becomes law.

State-church separation protects our public schools by keeping prayers officiated by teachers or administrators out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

This separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars must be used for wholly non-sectarian public purposes that benefit all.

State-church separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what any individual public employee believes or whether they practice a religion, and there must be no taxpayer-funded religious groups because they discriminate according to their religious bias. All religions are inherently biased.

Sincerely,
Ms. Nancy Yuen

[redacted]

From: Vicki Jenkins <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 14:25:58 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Vicki Jenkins

[redacted]

From: Richard Fisher <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 14:26:45 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

It was Thomas Jefferson in 1803 who first used the phrase "Separation of Church and State" as a clear statement supporting the first amendment.

In a multicultural democracy such as the US, separation of church and state is essential to the freedom of all citizens,.

Sincerely,
Dr Richard Fisher

[redacted]

From: Lucia Hall <PII>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <PII>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 14:26:56 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Ms. Lucia Hall

PII PII

From: Daniel Samber <PII>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <PII>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 14:27:04 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Daniel Samber

PII
PII

From: Reuben Wade <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 14:27:09 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Mr. Reuben Wade

[redacted]

From: Nancy Michon <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 14:27:09 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate. This is a basic founding principle of our republic.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Ms. Nancy Michon
[redacted]

From: Lauren Johnson <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 14:27:09 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Lauren Johnson

[redacted]

From: GABRIELLA King <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 14:27:09 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
GABRIELLA King
[redacted]

From: Phylis Cohen <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 14:27:20 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Ms. Phylis Cohen

[redacted]

From: Myrna Mandlawitz <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 14:27:20 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

It is critical that the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

I am a member of a minority religion (Judaism). I have always believed separation of religion and state was put into our founding documents to ensure ALL residents of this great land can practice any religion (or none, if they choose) without interference and with the protection of the federal government.
The government should not impose any particular set of beliefs or restrictions on anyone's beliefs or favor one religion above another. Thomas Jefferson, from the Commonwealth of Virginia where I was born, in the 1786 wrote the Virginia Statute for Religious Freedom. That document, used in crafting the U.S. Constitution's Bill of Rights, stands the test of time and should remain the law of the land.

As a life-long educator, I also believe religion has no place in our public schools. Families decide what, if any, religion to practice and instill those values at home and in their places of worship. Public schools should welcome all students with all beliefs and backgrounds and should not impose any one religion or belief on students.

Finally, as a taxpayer, I do not want to be forced to fund religion, nor do I expect others of different religions to fund mine. This is a private function and should remain separate and apart from political control.

Sincerely,
Myrna Mandlawitz

[redacted]

From: Diane Crane <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 14:27:29 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Mrs. Diane Crane
[redacted]

From: Lindsay Sexton <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 14:27:35 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Lindsay Sexton

[redacted]

From: Roslyn Feldberg <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 14:27:56 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans. It is personally important to me and to many other people I know.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs. And hopefully it means that the rituals and prayers of one religion are not privileged over those of other religions.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Ms. Roslyn Feldberg

[redacted]

From: Ross Pumfrey <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 14:28:10 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

I have read a lot about U.S. history over the years. It has always been apparent to me that one of the objectives of the Founders was to find ways to avoid all the religious wars that had taken place in Europe over the centuries. This objective is what was behind what is now know as the "Establishment Clause" in the first amendment to the Constitution. This was one of the important factors that made our country different from almost all others that had preceded.

I urge the Religious Liberty Commission's to make clear in its final report the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference, and protects our public schools from instrusion by churches.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Thank you for your attention.

Sincerely,
Mr. Ross Pumfrey
[redacted]

From: cindy beckley <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 14:28:10 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
cindy beckley
[redacted]

From: John Messer <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 14:28:20 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Mr. John Messer
[redacted]

From: Adrienne Giangiordano <PII>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <PII>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 14:28:24 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Adrienne Giangiordano

PII PII

From: Angela Fields <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 14:28:33 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Angela Fields
[redacted]

From: Virginia Collins <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 14:28:37 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.p99 p

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Ms Virginia Collins
[redacted]

From: Lisa Stone <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 14:28:45 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Ms. Lisa Stone

[redacted]

From: "Steven G. Kellman" <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 14:29:45 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Dr. Steven G. Kellman
[redacted]

From: Peggy Papert <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 14:29:45 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Peggy Papert

[redacted]

From: Samhitha Sreenivasan <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 14:30:17 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others. It also prevents the corruption of faith with political power mongering. Our civic structures should be civic and faith should be faith.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Ms. Samhitha Sreenivasan

[redacted]

From: Michael Page <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 14:30:27 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Mr. Michael Page

[redacted]

From: Marilyn Waltasti <PII>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <PII>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 14:31:05 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Mrs. Marilyn Waltasti

PII PII

From: Judith Peter <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 14:31:12 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Mrs. Judith Peter

[redacted]

From: Bobbie Parker <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 14:31:24 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Mr. Bobbie Parker

[redacted]

From: Sandi Hebley <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 14:31:57 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Indoctrination to one particular sect of one particular religion violates our Constitution!

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Ms Sandi Hebley
[redacted]

From: Kate Ruland <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 14:32:11 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Kate Ruland

[redacted]

From: Karen Williams <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 14:32:25 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice. Since there are five major religions in the world and about 4,000 recognized religions, keeping our religious freedom is vital to the well-being of the nation. That's why our religious freedoms are in the very First Amendment of our Constitution.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit all of us.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Lt Col Karen Williams
[redacted]

From: James Cubberly <PII>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <PII>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 14:33:13 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
James Cubberly

PII PII

From: Stephen Diamond <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 14:33:23 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Stephen Diamond
[redacted]

From: Margaret Hepler <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 14:33:24 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Ms. Margaret Hepler
[redacted]

From: Rolf Moan <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 14:33:42 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Rolf Moan

[redacted]

From: Lindsey Butler <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 14:34:06 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Ms. Lindsey Butler

[redacted]

From: Paul Kolhoff <PII>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <PII>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 14:34:39 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Thank you for considering my position.

Sincerely,
Mr. Paul Kolhoff

PII PII

From: Norma Wade <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 14:34:40 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others. Without freedom of religion there is no freedom. Keep our govt. Secular as it always has been

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Ms. Norma Wade

[redacted]

From: Mary Harris <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 14:35:23 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Dr. Mary Harris
[redacted]

From: Lynda Phoenix <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 14:35:29 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate. There is no 'Freedom of Religion's when the State is dictating which religions are ok and which are not. Also the warping of religious values seems to be a political 'given'. History will show that the most horrendous atrocities often have the backing of religions. Keep Church and State separated, otherwise the State will end up dictating to Religions or Religions will start dictating to the State. Neither is a good option.

Sincerely,
Ms. Lynda Phoenix
[redacted]

From: John Gregg <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 14:35:53 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Mr. John Gregg
[redacted]

From: George Pate <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 14:35:56 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Dr. George Pate

[redacted]

From: Peter Redmer <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 14:36:05 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion, or no religion, as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and non-religious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another.

Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

My wife is a public school teacher with a diverse range of students each year, from all walks of life and faith. This protects those kids and their families as well.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Mr. Peter Redmer

[redacted]

From: Sandra Minnesang <PII>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <PII>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 14:36:54 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Ms. Sandra Minnesang

PII PII

From: Kris Ledford <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 14:36:54 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Kris Ledford

[redacted]

From: Andrew Jackson <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 14:37:06 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Mr. Andrew Jackson
[redacted]

From: Mary Sue Baker <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 14:37:21 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

I don't want to be a Christian! I am an Atheist and know that I am kinder and more tolerant than the people who use Christianity to spread their hate and cruelty. No one has the right to demand that everyone should follow their own personal beliefs. Fascism has come knocking and the Republicans have answered.

Sincerely,
Ms. Mary Sue Baker
[redacted]

From: CAMILLE BRATKOWSKI <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 14:37:21 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
CAMILLE BRATKOWSKI
[redacted]

From: Lyone Fein <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 14:37:21 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

I am Jewish. My grandparents came to this country in the early years of the 20th century because faced economic persecution as well as physical violence in their Eastern European communities. The United States has long been known around the world as a land of freedom and justice.

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Dr. Lyone Fein
[redacted]

From: Laurel Kornfeld <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 14:38:06 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Ms. Laurel Kornfeld
[redacted]

From: Dennis Kreiner <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 14:38:29 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
mr Dennis Kreiner

[redacted]

From: Nora Hedrick <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 14:38:37 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Ms Nora Hedrick
[redacted]

From: Tom Snyder <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 14:39:02 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Mr. Tom Snyder

[redacted]

From: Roberta Spiro <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 14:39:25 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

I believe that the separation of church and state is vital to protect religious freedom for all Americans. It is essential that citizens have the right to practice any religion, or no religion at all. Both government and religion do best when they are separate.

Separation of church and state ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Separation of church and state protects our public schools by not forcing students to pray. Schools must be a comfortable place for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Taxpayer dollars should not be used to fund religion. Separation of church and state assures that taxpayer dollars go for public purposes that benefit everyone, not just those who are members of a certain religion.

Please make sure that your final report emphasizes the important role that the separation of church and state has in protecting all citizens, regardless of their beliefs.

Sincerely,
Roberta Spiro

[redacted]

From: Victoria Fortin <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 14:39:30 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Ms. Victoria Fortin

[redacted]

From: Claire A Yurdin <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 14:39:34 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Mrs. Claire A Yurdin

[redacted]

From: Ann Daane <PII>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <PII>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 14:39:58 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

I cannot imagine any dedicated, Constitution-loving American would ever be careless about our separation of church and state. It is foundational to our American way of life.

Sincerely,
Ann Daane
PII PII

From: M Wayne Wilson <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 14:40:18 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Dr. M Wayne Wilson
[redacted]

From: Linda Moorman Linda Moorman <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 14:40:34 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Ms. Linda Moorman Linda Moorman
[redacted]

From: Kenneth Nahigian <PII>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <PII>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 14:40:42 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Mr. Kenneth Nahigian

PII
PII

From: Maddy Sando <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 14:41:09 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Ms. Maddy Sando
[redacted]

From: colleen fraser <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 14:41:59 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Mrs. colleen fraser
[redacted]

From: "M. Doug Gerrard" <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 14:42:24 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Mr. M. Doug Gerrard

[redacted]

From: r s <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 14:42:30 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
r s

[redacted]

From: Stanley Naimon <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 14:42:31 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Mx. Stanley Naimon
[redacted]

From: Manny Dayfield <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 14:42:47 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

America was founded by  people who fled religious persecution . Our founding fathers understood this and I hope and pray that you stay true to their profounds words in our Constitution .

Sincerely,
Manny Dayfield

[redacted]

From: Ashley Hanshaw <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 14:42:47 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Ashley Hanshaw
[redacted]

From: Marilyn Shepherd <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 14:43:25 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Ms. Marilyn Shepherd
[redacted]

From: patricia Moriarty <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 14:43:47 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

The currently pushed religion in USA is not my religion. I have been an American for almost 85 years now, and have never seen a value for a government sponsored or sanctioned religion in this country. Many people in my circles do not belong to the same religion as I do and are still very good strong caring people. We need all of these good Americans and they all have always (still need) rights to their own religion. Government interference will destroy this right and the good religious people will become something we do not want - - - black sheep?

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Mrs. patricia Moriarty
[redacted]

From: Robert Swenson <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 14:44:17 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

The separation of church and state is enshrined in the first amendment to the Constitution when it states: "Congress shall make no lawrespecting an establishment of religion, or prohibiting the free exercise thereof;". It is imperative that this principal be upheld as a cornerstone of our individual freedoms.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or don't believe, and whether or not they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Mr. Robert Swenson
[redacted]

From: Doris Lein <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 14:44:25 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Ms. Doris Lein
[redacted]

From: Michael Myers <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 14:44:47 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Mr. Michael Myers

[redacted]

From: Norman Sandel <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 14:44:47 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Mr. Norman Sandel
[redacted]

From: Vicki Fox <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 14:44:48 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Ms Vicki Fox
[redacted]

From: Laura Nathan <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 14:45:06 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Laura Nathan
[redacted]

From: William McSherry <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 14:45:20 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

I was raised as a christian and I cherish the values I was taught, which include honesty, integrity, compassion, and love for all humans regardless of race, creed, color, etc.

I also learned about the TRUE origin of our country, whereby our Founders rejected any resemblance of a king or single authority. They also REJECTED any form of theocracy in the government they INTENTIONALLY designed, for good reasons.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others. This separation encourages us to recognize that all people have a right to autonomy, justice, and freedom to practice whatever religion, or no religion, of THEIR CHOICE.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government CANNOT IMPOSE RELIGIOUS BELIEFS on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

I URGE you to reject any attempt to proclaim our great American company as a theocracy, or to do anything that would bring us closer to anything resembling theocracy. We are our best when we adhere to the pluralistic, multiracial, and multicultural country I've known and loved my entire life.

Sincerely,
DR. William McSherry
[redacted]

From: Rene Merwin <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 14:45:36 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Ms. Rene Merwin
[redacted]

From: Leslie McClure <PII>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <PII>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 14:45:40 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Americans do value church-state separation, it does make our country stronger, and we will not tolerate it being erased!

Sincerely,
Leslie McClure

From: Lara Ingraham <PII>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <PII>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 14:45:47 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Ms. Lara Ingraham

PII PII

From: Rebecca Crowder <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 14:46:34 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Rebecca Crowder
[redacted]

From: Brad Smith <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 14:46:39 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Brad Smith

[redacted]

From: Victoria Hodge <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 14:46:49 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Ms. Victoria Hodge
[redacted]

From: James Zaenglein <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 14:46:49 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Dr. James Zaenglein

[redacted]

From: Darlene May <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 14:47:01 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Dr. Darlene May
[redacted]

From: Michael Aikey <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 14:47:10 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Michael Aikey

[redacted]

From: Martha O'Brien <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 14:47:25 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Ms. Martha O'Brien

[redacted]

From: CATHY CARLETON <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 14:47:34 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Ms. CATHY CARLETON
[redacted]

From: vicki hughes <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 14:47:40 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Mrs. vicki hughes

[redacted]

From: Jim May <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 14:48:36 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Jim May

[redacted]

From: Christina Roe <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 14:48:46 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Ms. Christina Roe
[redacted]

From: Steven Solomon <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 14:48:46 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Mr. Steven Solomon

[redacted]

From: Sarah Stewart <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 14:49:12 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Dr. Sarah Stewart
[redacted]

From: Sheryl Kallivrousis <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 14:49:55 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

As an Atheist, the separation of church and state gives me the right to practice no religion as long as I don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Sheryl Kallivrousis

[redacted]

From: Therese Dykeman <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 14:50:17 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Separation of Church and State was a wise policy, a policy that is threatened. It Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Dr. Therese Dykeman
[redacted]

From: Gregory Smith <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 14:50:21 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Mr Gregory Smith
[redacted]

From: Bryce Purdy <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 14:50:42 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

The separation of church and state is a bedrock concept anchored in the first amendment.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

Sincerely,
Bryce Purdy

[redacted]

From: Stacey Marchig <PII>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <PII>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 14:50:42 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Ms. Stacey Marchig

PII
PII

From: Donald Suzenski <PII>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <PII>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 14:51:12 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Mr. Donald Suzenski
PII PII

From: Michelle Manke <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 14:51:25 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

It is essential that the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping prayer out of classrooms. It ensures that schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars must only be used for public purposes that benefit everyone. Taxpayer dollars must NEVER be used to support any particular religion or religion in general.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Ms. Michelle Manke

[redacted]

From: "J. Mcguire" <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 14:52:01 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

If government can permit or engage in religious intolerance for minority religions today, it can engage in religious intolerance for one or more majority religions tomorrow.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
J. Mcguire

[redacted]

From: Ernie Looney <PII>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <PII>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 14:52:01 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Mr. Ernie Looney

PII
PII

From: Kurt-IMPEACH Gross-TRUMP <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 14:52:22 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Kurt-IMPEACH Gross-TRUMP
[redacted]

From: Beth Goodwin <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 14:52:30 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Ms. Beth Goodwin
[redacted]

From: Ross Herman <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 14:53:02 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Ross Herman

[redacted]

From: Midge Epstein <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 14:53:30 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

I am a Christian and an active churchgoer. Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

It is unfair and unwise to merge church and state. This is why our founders considered this a bedrock of our nation. Please ensure it stays that way.

Sincerely,
Ms. Midge Epstein

[redacted]

From: Susan Haywood <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 14:53:48 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Politics have no place in religion; religion has no place in politics.

Sincerely,
Ms. Susan Haywood
[redacted]

From: Flo Brodley <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 14:54:15 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Each of us, in this Land of the Free, has the freedom to choose our own path toward enlightenment. No-one, in this Land of the Free, should have the right to Instruct or Deny others!

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Flo Brodley

[redacted]

From: JOAN HILDRETH <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 14:54:32 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
JOAN HILDRETH
[redacted]

From: Michael Lewitke <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 14:55:08 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Mr. Michael Lewitke
[redacted]

From: Lu Ben <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 14:55:09 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Lu Ben
[redacted]

From: Lynn Redmon <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 14:55:15 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Dr. Lynn Redmon
[redacted]

From: Kevin Hopson <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 14:56:15 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Mr. Kevin Hopson
[redacted]

From: John Simonelli <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 14:56:18 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Mr. John Simonelli

[redacted]

From: "W. Wayne Marlow" <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 14:56:30 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
W. Wayne Marlow
[redacted]

From: Matthew Shapiro <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 14:56:31 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Matthew Shapiro
[redacted]

From: Gennaro Cuozzo <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 14:56:35 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.
Our democracy is built on personal freedoms and it is one of the most important things that make this country great.

Sincerely,
Gennaro Cuozzo

[redacted]

From: Fran Romero <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 14:57:16 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Mrs. Fran Romero

[redacted]

From: Jeffrey Panciera <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 14:57:17 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Mr. Jeffrey Panciera
[redacted]

From: Zareth Jones <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 14:57:17 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Ms. Zareth Jones

[redacted]

From: Marshall Louise Mccorkle <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 14:57:30 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Ms. Marshall Louise Mccorkle

[redacted]

From: Brenda Gamache <PII>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <PII>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 14:57:59 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Brenda Gamache

PII
PII

From: Steven Latus <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 14:58:18 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Steven Latus
[redacted]

From: Nancy E Pettitt <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 14:58:18 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state guarantees  you the right to practice your religion no matter who is in power in the U.S. government.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by ensuring  schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.  It also keeps coercive prayer out of classrooms.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion, religious practices that you may or may not agree with. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Nancy E Pettitt

[redacted]

From: Susan Robinson <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 14:59:20 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Our government should be completely separate from all religions and beliefs regarding religion. As an atheist, I am not entitled to have our government proclaim my beliefs, that there are no gods. Likewise, a member of ANY religion is not entitiled to have any part of government proclaim their beliefs. Also, no religion should get preferential treatment. The government must be completely neutral regarding all religions and non-religion.

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Susan Robinson
[redacted]

From: Barbara Daoust-Westbrooks <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 14:59:20 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Ms. Barbara Daoust-Westbrooks

[redacted]

From: Allen Hicks <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 14:59:28 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

The Religious Liberty Commission's final report must reflect the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Mr. Allen Hicks
[redacted]

From: Sarah Del Grande <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 14:59:36 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Sarah Del Grande

[redacted]

From: "G. Paul Richter" <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 14:59:56 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used ONLY for public purposes that benefit everyone, those of religious nature of ANY FAITH and those who have no religious affiliation whatsoever!!

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Dr. G. Paul Richter

[redacted]

From: Christi Offstein <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 15:00:21 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Apparently you haven't read the Constitution or maybe just the parts you like. Actually I can't believe I'm even responding to something so factual and simple to understand. I hope you come to comprehend straight-forward facts. It makes life easier.

Sincerely,
Christi Offstein

[redacted]

From: Susan Levy <PII>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <PII>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 15:00:21 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Susan Levy

PII
PII

From: Elizabeth Egan <PII>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <PII>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 15:00:22 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Dr Elizabeth Egan

PII PII

From: John Ragosta <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 15:00:37 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

18th century evangelicals, led by Presbyterians and Baptists, had suffered under state establishments and understood that mixing church and state corrupted both. Baptist minister Lewis Lunford declared that “The unlawful cohabitation between Church and State, which has so often been looked upon as holy wedlock, must now suffer a separation and be put forever asunder.” They knew what was at stake and demanded Thomas Jefferson's Statute for Establishing Religious Freedom and a First Amendment ensuring a separation of church and state. This was evangelical policy for many years. Jerry Falwell Sr. insisted upon a strict separation and no government funds for religious schools (until, after 1954, he saw an opportunity to maintain racial segregation in "Christian academies" funded by government vouchers and other assistance.

Don't take us backwards. The history is well-documented: See Wellspring of Liberty or Religious Freedom: Jefferson's Legacy, America's Creed.

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission’s final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans. No one has a real, free right to believe if they don't have an equal right, unimpaired by government influence, not to believe.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don’t harm others.

Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate. The Second Great Awakening was the result of separation and the resulting free market of religion, as Alexis de Tocqueville recognized.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Dr John Ragosta

[redacted]

From: Sharon Lazzara <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 15:01:44 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Sharon Lazzara
[redacted]

From: Brian Barnhart <PII>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <PII>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 15:02:22 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Brian Barnhart

PII
PII

From: Louise Stark <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 15:02:23 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others. No one has the right to impose their religion on others. This is especially true of employers and government agencies who use public meetings or work-required events to insert their religious practices via prayer.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Ms. Louise Stark

[redacted]

From: Kenn Colclasure <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 15:02:23 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

I do not wish to live under the American Taliban.

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Kenn Colclasure

[redacted]

From: Hal Hunter <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 15:02:48 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

There is nothing in the Constitution that supports a religious state. To the contrary, the Founders excluded all references to religion except "In God we trust," — without specifying which God.

Sincerely,
Dr. Hal Hunter

[redacted]

From: Eugene Gorrin <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 15:02:56 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Thank you.

Sincerely,
Mr. Eugene Gorrin
[redacted]

From: Daniel Schneider <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 15:04:01 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

I support the Founding Fathers decision to include separation of church and state as part of the Bill of Rights.

If you don't support the writings of the Founders. YOU can kiss my grits!

Sincerely,
Daniel Schneider
[redacted]

From: Jennifer Ferraro <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 15:04:01 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Mrs Jennifer Ferraro
[redacted]

From: James Palmquist <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 15:04:23 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Mr. James Palmquist
[redacted]

From: Brian DiVasta <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 15:05:23 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Brian DiVasta

[redacted]

From: Dennis Smith <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 15:05:29 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Dennis Smith

[redacted]

From: Terence Hero <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 15:05:57 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

The Religious Liberty Commission's final report should ABSOLUTELY reflect the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Mr. Terence Hero

[redacted]

From: Neil King <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 15:06:15 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate

Separation of church and state is a constitutional protection of great importance to me. It is already being whittled away in an unconscionable fashion. Your Commission should not diminish it any further.

Sincerely,
Neil King

[redacted]

From: Stephen Patrick <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 15:06:25 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate. THERE IS A REASON THE FOUNDERS SOUGHT THE SEPARATION OF CHURCH AND STATE! PAY ATTENTION TO THIS!

Sincerely,
Mr. Stephen Patrick

[redacted]

From: Stephen Mudrick <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 15:06:29 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

I don't want another "Northern Ireland" here. I hope you do not, either.

Sincerely,
Mr. Stephen Mudrick
[redacted]

From: Joyce Frohn <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 15:06:59 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Ms. Joyce Frohn

[redacted]

From: Milo Matthews <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 15:06:59 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Mr. Milo Matthews
[redacted]

From: William Kuehnling <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 15:07:23 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Dr. William Kuehnling
[redacted]

From: Suzanne Schock <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 15:07:28 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Mrs. Suzanne Schock

[redacted]

From: Jean McCollom <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 15:07:42 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Jean McCollom
[redacted]

From: Ann Randall <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 15:08:18 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

I write as a Christian to express my concerns from a Christian point of view. The Religious Liberty Commission's final report must reflect the role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans. At the same time, it also needs to reflect the role it plays in protecting religion from the state.

Along with many other Christians, I accept the principle that separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we do not harm others.

It is just as important to recognize that it prohibits the government from imposing religious beliefs on anyone or favoring any one religion over another. This nation's Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—are allowed to make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government. It guarantees not only that every religion, but also every denomination within Christianity, is allowed independence from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming places of learning for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund the particular religious doctrines of someone else. Taxpayer dollars are for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law — justice (Matt. 23:23). The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice any religion at all. Otherwise, government and religion are both corrupted.

Sincerely,
Mrs. Ann Randall
[redacted]

From: Gary Snowden <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 15:08:18 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Dr. Gary Snowden
[redacted]

From: Mike Duever <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 15:09:07 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Mike Duever
[redacted]

From: Christopher Wall <PII>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <PII>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 15:09:07 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Mr. Christopher Wall

PII
PII

From: Brett Myers <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 15:09:19 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Brett Myers

[redacted]

From: Judith Auerbach <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 15:09:19 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Ms. Judith Auerbach

[redacted]

From: Deborah Miller <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 15:09:32 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Deborah Miller
[redacted]

From: James Christiansen <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 15:09:37 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

We support complete separation of Church and State and our constitution that makes this separation clear. All Americans should feel included and welcome regardless of their religious affiliation. Our government myst be careful not to release statements that appear to favor a particular religious group or sect.

Sincerely,
Dr. James Christiansen

[redacted]

From: Emily Holcomb <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 15:09:37 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Mrs. Emily Holcomb

[redacted]

From: Gary Holcomb <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 15:10:19 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Dr. Gary Holcomb

[redacted]
[redacted]

From: T Reading <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 15:10:23 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Ms. T Reading

[redacted]

From: Robin Dumler <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 15:10:34 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Dr. Robin Dumler

[redacted]

From: Mark Waltzer <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 15:10:41 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Dr Mark Waltzer

[redacted]

From: Douglas Sedon <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 15:11:00 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Mr. Douglas Sedon
[redacted]

From: Eric Thomas <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 15:11:06 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Church/state separation is not a myth. It is enshrined in the first amendment of the constitution. The founding fathers were clear on this point. Over and over again, they stressed that government should have no opinion on nor take any action either for or against anybody's religion or lack thereof. As I understand it, the current draft of your report denies this fact. Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Mr. Eric Thomas
[redacted]

From: Stewart Austin <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 15:11:41 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Stewart Austin
[redacted]

From: William Clarke <PII>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <PII>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 15:12:09 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Mr. William Clarke

PII PII

From: Ann Berndt <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 15:12:30 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Mrs. Ann Berndt
[redacted]

From: Sybil Schwartzbach <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 15:12:40 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Ms. Sybil Schwartzbach

[redacted]

From: vincent grove <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 15:12:47 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
vincent grove

[redacted]

From: Ann Berndt <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 15:13:20 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Ann Berndt

[redacted]

From: Monica Lavery <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 15:13:33 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My Christian congregation just completed a series study of our Constitution, for the 250th of our Great Nation. According to our Constitution, the government is not advance one religion over another, or to get in the way of the free practice of any religion, Christian or otherwise Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Mrs. Monica Lavery
[redacted]

From: Emily Everhart <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 15:13:41 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Emily Everhart

[redacted]

From: Karli Prill <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 15:14:21 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My message is simple and clear: this movement of "Christian Nationalism" does not represent the true will of the American people, and is a stain on our reputation as a just and free nation.

Christianity has been slowly woven into politics over time by people of authority-- and it's still happening right now. The constitution of the United States of America prohibits the government from both endorsement or chastisement of any religion, of which thousands exist.

The separation of Church and State is one of the most important foundations of American society that makes us great and moving forward. Anything less than a complete and absolute separation of religion from government is an active disservice to the American people that encourages internal conflict which will dissolve the social, political, and economic fabric of America from the inside out.

We succeed as a nation because our collective faith belongs to the good will of the people that contribute to the advancement and protection of our society everyday. These good people are guided by morals and values not congruent with any one sect of religion.

One could argue that each individual person is a unique religion within itself-- we all arrive at our own personal conclusions regarding religion because of the experiences we have, not because of any government influence. This individual interpretation is what requires protection by and from the government.

No one should have to feel that they must convert to a different religion or change their beliefs out of duress from the government. The American people recognize when those in power weaponize religion to control other people, and we will not allow it.

Laws should never reflect religious values. Law is unbiased, independently moral, and fair to everyone. Every religious-based conclusion reached in law is another step towards the dissolution of our country.

I have great patriotism and passion towards pursuing and upholding the ideal of The United States of America, and for the Republic for which it stands. This includes every religious minority found within the Republic. I will not support any measure of movement towards something that does not embrace this ideal.

The American people will be heavily hurt by this movement. The Religious Liberty Commission is responsible for protecting every single religion that the citizens of the U.S. practice. Not just a select few.

The government was given power by the people to protect the people. Now, more than ever, we need religious protection. Do not fail us. And do not confuse 'all of us' with 'the majority'.

Sincerely,

Karli Prill

Sincerely,

Karli Prill

From: Phoenix Giffen <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 15:14:21 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Mr. Phoenix Giffen
[redacted]

From: Kara Huberman <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 15:14:23 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Ms. Kara Huberman
[redacted]

From: George Czerw <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 15:14:23 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

I'm writing to request that you ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role which church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans. The separation of church and state gives each and every one of us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as such practice does no harm to others.

The separation of church and state protects religious freedom for everyone, both religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founding Fathers recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state also guarantees that students and families, not government officials, can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects all of our houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation also protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures that schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion. Taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

In conclusion, we Americans do value the separation of church and state, as it does make our country stronger. We will not tolerate it being erased by the actions of a dubious commission.

Sincerely,
M. George Czerw

[redacted]

From: Eileen MacDougall <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 15:14:23 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Eileen MacDougall

[redacted]

From: Brandt Mannchen <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 15:14:30 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

I don't support the deification of the Christian or any other religion in government actions. I oppose any action by the Commission which degrades or destroys the separation of church and state.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Brandt Mannchen

[redacted]

From: Bobbi Jett <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 15:15:24 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Bobbi Jett

[redacted]

From: Dominick Rirnz <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 15:15:24 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Mr. Dominick Rirnz

[redacted]

From: Stacey Cannon <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 15:16:24 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Ms. Stacey Cannon
[redacted]

From: Mike Follman <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 15:16:24 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Mr Mike Follman
[redacted]

From: John Doucette <PII>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <PII>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 15:16:24 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Mr. John Doucette

PII PII

From: Robert LOSHUERTOS <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 15:16:24 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Robert LOSHUERTOS

[redacted]

From: Heather Geye <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 15:17:24 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Ms. Heather Geye
[redacted]

From: Julie Long <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 15:17:34 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others. Choice of religious affiliation is inherently personal.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Linking state and religion can severely harm people of faith. Case in point, the currently heinous actions of the state of Israel and the ramifications being felt by Jews worldwide.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Julie Long
[redacted]

From: Lee Jenkinson <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 15:17:46 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Historically, when the Church gets the active backing of government, it becomes punitive and controlling, as witnessed by the Spanish Inquisition and thw Salem Witch Trials.

Sincerely,
Mr Lee Jenkinson

[redacted]

From: William Wekselman <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 15:19:06 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
William Wekselman

[redacted]

From: Norma Jean Falink <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 15:19:17 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Norma Jean Falink

[redacted]

From: Carolyn Schiffhouer <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 15:19:17 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Carolyn Schiffhouer

[redacted]

From: Jim Ahearn <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 15:19:34 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Jim Ahearn

[redacted]

From: Kay Smith <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 15:20:25 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

I'm writing to urge the Religious Liberty Commission's final report to reflect the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate. This is a very important principle to me as an American citizen and a person of faith.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate. Please include this vital perspective in your report.

Sincerely,
Ms. Kay Smith
[redacted]

From: Peggy Summers <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 15:20:36 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Ms Peggy Summers

[redacted]

From: Shawna McCracken <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 15:20:47 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Shawna McCracken

[redacted]

From: Kathleen Gorman <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 15:21:17 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Kathleen Gorman
[redacted]

From: Brenda Hattisburg <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 15:21:36 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Ms Brenda Hattisburg
[redacted]

From: Marian Furst <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 15:22:21 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

I am writing as the child of parents who came to the United States as refugees to escape pervasive religious persicution in the countries where they were born. They cherished the religious freedom they found here. While attending 1st-3rd grade in a public school in the US, I was required to recite a Christian prayer daily. This act of coerced religious expression was meaningless and wasted my time, since I was not brought up in a Christian household, didn't understand the high-level language in the prayer, and didn't even realize it was a prayer for a year and a half.

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Dr. Marian Furst

[redacted]

From: Jo Meyer <PII>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <PII>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 15:23:00 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Jo Meyer

PII
PII

From: Laura Taylor <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 15:23:25 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Laura Taylor

[redacted]

From: George Waters <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 15:24:04 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
George Waters

From: Sonja Chan <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 15:24:20 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Sonja Chan

[redacted]

From: Michael Troner <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 15:25:06 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.
I refer you to George Washington's letter to the Touro congregation of Newport Rhode Island in 1790.
"Religious freedom is an inherent right available to all citizens. It is not a government granted privilege" (paraphrased).
As a practicing Jew, I do not need to have the government declare what religious texts need to be studied. That should be my choice and my choice alone.

Sincerely,
Dr. Michael Troner

[redacted]

From: Tammy Banks <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 15:25:25 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Ms. Tammy Banks
[redacted]

From: Greg Garbulinski <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 15:26:16 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

GREETINGS!

America
America 250th
trump : This name branded, stamped on Our Nation IS pure Toxic Contamination!

AND please NOT on money & coins too...

" In trump, We Do Not TRUST! "  Separate & Clear!

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

EARTH Light "ON"
Family and Friends TOGETHER!
AMERICA
AMERICA 250th
Definitely NOT trumpica!!!
Deranged ((( Danger to the World!!!

People do Think Kindness Is a Key!

Humor is Good Too!

But Sociopaths & Psychos have a hard TIME with this.
They need to do HARD TIME!

OK already, a daily reminder we try to enact every day of our lives. Everything is OK. All around us, ideally OK. Family & Friends are OK. A wise and sensible course of living on Planet Earth, Could be very OK. We look to the Future and say It'll be OK... And leaders reassure US It'll be OK. OK!

https://protect2.fireeye.com/v1/url?k=202a0ac8-7fb62824-202d2e2d-000babff85fc-ac58b55978161e29&q=1&e=b20b5e1e-1614-4799-a64c-16dd9962a24b&u=http%3A%2F%2Fwww.cutmilitaryspending.com%2F https://protect2.fireeye.com/v1/url?k=ce5ea90d-91c28be1-ce598de8-000babff85fc-bb680734c20bc75e&q=1&e=b20b5e1e-1614-4799-a64c-16dd9962a24b&u=http%3A%2F%2Fwww.gregsuniverse.com%2F

Greg's Universe Publishing/ Th. Trkstar
https://protect2.fireeye.com/v1/url?k=aa52c6f0-f5cee41c-aa55e215-000babff85fc-22f3553c9760cfa9&q=1&e=b20b5e1e-1614-4799-a64c-16dd9962a24b&u=http%3A%2F%2Fwww.cutmilitaryspending.com%2F https://protect2.fireeye.com/v1/url?k=14a95dfd-4b357f11-14ae7918-000babff85fc-d0ace7d0fd02d97c&q=1&e=b20b5e1e-1614-4799-a64c-16dd9962a24b&u=http%3A%2F%2Fwww.gregsuniverse.com%2F

Best "for the Future" Wishes! Greg

America 250th... Celebrate  without Toxic trump Taint!

Sincerely,
Mr. Greg Garbulinski

From: William Banze <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 15:26:19 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
William Banze
[redacted]

From: John Cassinari <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 15:27:26 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Mr. John Cassinari
[redacted]

From: Robert Depew <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 15:27:43 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Robert Depew

[redacted]

From: Loretta Kinney <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 15:28:26 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Ms. Loretta Kinney

[redacted]

From: thomas wible <PII>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <PII>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 15:29:00 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Just SAY NO to Christianist sharia!

Sincerely,
thomas wible

PII
PII

From: Jennifer Sergent <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 15:29:26 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Jennifer Sergent

[redacted]

From: Leah Bourne <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 15:30:26 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

The US, as per many documents by the founders of this nation, is not and has never been a "christian nation."

The US Constitution does not give the federal government the right to impose one cult's particular beliefs on the public, nor does it give the government the authority to decide what is or is not a "valid" religion.

Rather, the constitution completely separates religion and state. Federal laws cannot favor, or disfavor, anyone's religion, no matter how large or small the number of adherents to that spiritual path.

The federal government is a secular institution, not an enforcement arm for any one cult.

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Nor does the federal government have the right to subvert  a parent's non-christian religious training for their child in public school classrooms by imposing christian documents or prayers into the classroom.  Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for secular, scientifically, and historically, accurate public purposes that benefit everyone.  If a cult is ashamed of the actions of their predecessors due to the violence, hatred, bigotry, oppression, enslavement, and murder of people of other faiths, that is not an excuse for distorting history.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Leah Bourne

[redacted]

From: Steven Davies <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 15:30:30 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Mr. Steven Davies

[redacted]

From: Sandra Liss <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 15:30:56 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Ms. Sandra Liss
[redacted]

From: Rebecca Dailey <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 15:31:13 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Ms Rebecca Dailey

[redacted]

From: Marionei Bernstein <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 15:31:26 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

As the daughter of a man who was forced to leave the land of his birth by overt government discrimination against his religion, I am proud that America is a welcoming home to all faiths. I am grateful that our country's founders explicitly protected us from Europe's bloody religious wars.

Sincerely,
Mrs Marionei Bernstein

[redacted]

From: Keith Otten <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 15:31:26 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Religion has no place in government. None. Zero. Those of us who do not share your extreme views will not put up with having your god shoved down our throats. You do not own morality. You do not own ethics. You cannot impose your will on the rest of us.

Sincerely,
Keith Otten

[redacted]

From: Margaret Dyson-Cobb <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 15:32:14 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for ALL Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they even practice any religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Church-state separation is one of the foundational values of the United States of America. Please don't mess with what has set the USA apart from most other nations in the world!

Sincerely,
Ms. Margaret Dyson-Cobb
[redacted]

From: Gerald Kennedy <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 15:32:26 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Mr. Gerald Kennedy

[redacted]

From: Jim Loveland <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 15:32:26 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Mr. Jim Loveland

[redacted]

From: Kevin McKeever <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 15:32:57 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Kevin McKeever
[redacted]

From: Joseph Reidy <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 15:32:57 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Mr. Joseph Reidy
[redacted]

From: Michael Denton <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 15:33:27 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Mr. Michael Denton
[redacted]

From: Brett Bockhop <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 15:33:27 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Brett Bockhop

[redacted]

From: Lawrence Laurie Toner <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 15:33:40 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Mr. Lawrence Laurie Toner

[redacted]

From: Kelly Stockman <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 15:34:00 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

As a public school teacher, I teach all students from all religious backgrounds or none. All students are educated fairly without "indoctrination" of one set of beliefs over another. The separation of church and state is a vital function in public schools where ALL students are welcome, ALL learn and ALL succeed!

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Ms. Kelly Stockman
[redacted]

From: Susan Hathcock <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 15:34:18 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Religion is entirely a personal matter. The government has no right to endorse, exclude or in any way put itself began any religion and any American.

Sincerely,
Mrs. Susan Hathcock
[redacted]

From: Keith Becher <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 15:34:18 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Mr. Keith Becher
[redacted]

From: Sandra Laurenson <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 15:35:22 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the essential role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Sincerely,
Sandra Laurenson
[redacted]

From: Paul Nielsen <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 15:35:35 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Dr. Paul Nielsen

[redacted]

From: Marjorie Telerski <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 15:36:27 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Mrs Marjorie Telerski
[redacted]

From: Jean Hanson <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 15:36:51 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Jean Hanson
[redacted]

From: Pam Horovitz <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 15:36:56 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

I was raised as a Catholic but am now agnostic. I am deeply concerned about the possibility that this Commission will ignore the rights of those of us who do not wish to practice any religion in favor of a single religion.

The separation of church and state gives me and my family the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Ms. Pam Horovitz

[redacted]

From: Ollie Howe <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 15:37:01 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Mr. Ollie Howe

[redacted]

From: Lisa Heeg <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 15:37:55 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate. Tax all churches!!!

The United States of America is NOT and NEVER WAS a solely or pronounced Christian nation. There NEVER was a national religion attached, or anything done to indicate one. BY DESIGN.

ALL CITIZENS regardless of whether religious or not, regardless of which religion, are subject to equal and fair treatment in a nation that keeps religion OUT of government COMPLETELY.

And THAT'S HOW IT HAS TO BE, how it was meant to be. No religion in government!!!

We the People do NOT want what  Christian nationalists are trying and failing to sell us.

Separation of religion and State forever!!!

Sincerely,
Ms. Lisa Heeg

[redacted]

From: Jim Griffin <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 15:38:01 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Jim Griffin

[redacted]

From: Robert Zeller <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 15:38:11 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Robert Zeller
[redacted]

From: Jerald Vinikoff <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 15:38:27 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Read the First Amendment. Look at the Equal Protection jurisprudence on the Fifth and Fourteenth Amendments. Read the writings of various the Founding Fathers and Framers of the Constitution.

Sincerely,
Mr. Jerald Vinikoff
[redacted]

From: Aven Andersen <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 15:38:27 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

This country was founded on the idea that the government would be independent of religious influences. Moreover, its population consists of people of every and no religion. We the people should continue to fight to keep religion out of government. I'm even opposed to religious blessings at the opening of Congress and the term "In God We Trust" on our money. Keep religion out of government!

Sincerely,
Dr. Aven Andersen

[redacted]

From: Valerie Justus-Rusconi <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 15:38:27 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

No one should be subjected to the intimidations of a state sponsered religion, regardless of which religion it is!
Church= Faith, STATE MUST= FACT.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Mrs. Valerie Justus-Rusconi

[redacted]

From: Piotr Sliwka <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 15:38:39 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Mr. Piotr Sliwka

[redacted]

From: Ed Parks <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 15:39:04 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Thank you for your time and consideration.

Sincerely,
Mr. Ed Parks

[redacted]

From: Charles Esper <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 15:39:12 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Rev. Charles Esper

[redacted]

From: Kenneth Althiser <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 15:39:15 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Mr. Kenneth Althiser

[redacted]

From: Keith Brintzenhoff <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 15:39:52 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Mr. Keith Brintzenhoff

[redacted]

From: John Strubhart <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 15:40:04 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Mr. John Strubhart

[redacted]

From: Bruce and Sue Nelson <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 15:40:27 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure your final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Bruce and Sue Nelson

[redacted]

From: Joan Brannigan <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 15:40:41 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Ms Joan Brannigan

[redacted]

From: Sherri Lebow <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 15:40:51 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

I am writing to urge the Religious Liberty Commission to ensure its final report explicitly reflects the vital role that the separation of church and state plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

A strict constitutional boundary between religion and government is essential for the following reasons:

- Universal Freedom of Belief: Church-state separation protects both religious and nonreligious citizens. It ensures the government neither imposes religious beliefs nor favors one faith over another, allowing individuals and families—rather than government officials—to guide their own religious education.

- Institutional Independence: Keeping religion and government separate protects houses of worship from political control and government intrusion, preserving their autonomy.

- Inclusive Public Education: Maintaining this boundary protects public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms, ensuring a welcoming environment for students of all backgrounds.

- Fiscal Responsibility and Equity: Taxpayer funds should be allocated exclusively for public purposes that benefit everyone. Citizens should not be forced to fund religious initiatives, and taxpayer-funded groups must not be permitted to use religion as a basis for discrimination.

Our founders recognized that both religion and government flourish best when kept independent. I respectfully ask that the Commission uphold these foundational principles in its final report to guarantee equal treatment under the law for all citizens.

Sincerely,
Mrs. Sherri Lebow
[redacted]

From: Donald Gerstein <PII>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <PII>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 15:40:51 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Donald Gerstein

PII PII

From: Barbara Tetro <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 15:41:28 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Ms. Barbara Tetro

[redacted]

From: Patricia Fields-Modig <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 15:41:44 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Do you even know the history of the first Europeans who came to America? They came for religious freedom - they didn't want to be told what to believe! Every person on earth deserves to choose their own spiritual beliefs as long as they aren't harming others. So, keep your beliefs to yourselves and stop trying to ram them down our throats. Thank you.

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Patricia Fields-Modig
[redacted]

From: Kimberly Wine <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 15:41:51 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Kimberly Wine

[redacted]

From: Christina Knight <PII>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <PII>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 15:42:40 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Christina Knight

PII
PII

From: Brian Hudson <PII>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <PII>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 15:42:47 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Mr. Brian Hudson
PII
PII

From: Meredith Anderson <PII>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <PII>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 15:45:44 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Ms. Meredith Anderson

PII
PII

From: Michael Bannerman <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 15:45:48 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

I am a descendant from people who were in North America long before the United States became a country.

A good portion of them came for freedom of religion to Maryland and Pennsylvania. And Pennsylvania is the perfect example of Freedom of Conscience.

Did you know there was a Witch Trial here in 1684. This trial occurred nine years before the more famous Salem witch trials in Massachusetts. And there's a reason for it's lack of notority: Margaret Mattson in 1684, where she was accused of bewitching cattle but ultimately found guilty only of having the reputation of a witch, not of witchcraft itself.

William Penn presided over it himself and said there was no law against flying on a broom!

So, it is important to ensure the Religious Liberty Commission’s final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don’t harm others. It is something which is enshrined in the constitution.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

To be quite frank, your commission should be working on a US version of Laïcité since that's what the founders would be insisting on right now.

Not a theocracy.

Sincerely,
Mr. Michael Bannerman

PII

From: Ben Brucker <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 15:46:35 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Reverend Ben Brucker

[redacted]

From: Warner Smith <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 15:46:40 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Mr. Warner Smith

[redacted]

From: karen packer <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 15:47:53 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Ms. karen packer

[redacted]

From: Sammy Vancil <PII>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <PII>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 15:48:01 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Mr. Sammy Vancil

PII
PII

From: Marcy Woodruff <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 15:48:05 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Ms. Marcy Woodruff

[redacted]

From: Alison Williams Lewin <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 15:49:37 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

The Founders were very clear that they wanted NO national church or creed, and Jews and Muslims were here before the revolution, mentioned favorably by Jefferson, among others. No one religion has a lock on morality or patriotism - as an historian, I can assure you that plenty of evidence exists across cultures and religions exists to support that statement. Even atheists can agree on a basic moral code and do not need any church to know that the Golden Rule applies across the board.

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Dr. Alison Williams Lewin

[redacted]

From: Robin Lorentzen <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 15:50:03 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Dr. Robin Lorentzen

[redacted]

From: carl goddard <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 15:50:25 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
carl goddard

[redacted]

From: Kathy Sandknop <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 15:51:38 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Mrs. Kathy Sandknop

[redacted]

From: brenda lee <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 15:51:44 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Mrs. brenda lee
[redacted]

From: John Mitchell <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 15:52:11 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Separation of church and state is a founding principle of America.

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Mr. John Mitchell
[redacted]

From: Larry Salvatoriello <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 15:52:48 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Mr. Larry Salvatoriello
[redacted]

From: Debra Bradford <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 15:53:28 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Ms. Debra Bradford

[redacted]

From: Suzanne Deerlyjohnson <PII>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <PII>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 15:53:48 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Suzanne Deerlyjohnson

PII
PII

From: Jennifer Reinert <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 15:54:43 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Mrs. Jennifer Reinert
[redacted]

From: Michael Freidman <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 15:55:13 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that each of us has the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others and that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

CHURCH-STATE SEPARATION:
-protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

-protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

-protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

-ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

The separation of church and state is a fundamental belief and guarantee of this democracy and must be preserved. I depend on you and others granted this responsibility.

Sincerely,
Michael Freidman

[redacted]

From: Karen Fain <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 15:55:18 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Ms. Karen Fain

[redacted]

From: Jeffrey Strand <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 15:55:39 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans, consistent with the practice and vision of our country's Founders! The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

The Trump GOP Administration MUST NOT violate the United States Constitution by taking actions to threaten the longstanding and historical American practice of separation of Church and State. The immigrants who founded the United States, excluding those Indigenous Native Americans, carried with them the wisdom of Church-State Separation from the millions of lives lost and communities destroyed by centuries of religious wars fought in Europe! Do NOT repeat that mistake!

Sincerely,
Jeffrey Strand

[redacted]

From: Kathy Schiffer <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 15:56:28 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Kathy Schiffer

[redacted]

From: Stanley Keil <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 15:56:41 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others. It was often the most important reasons people immigrated to the United States. Catholics, Baptists, Quakers, Jews, Buddhists, and many others found a freedom here that did not exist in their homelands. One branch of my family were German dissenters found freedom to worship as they pleased and also to avoid the taxes many German States used to finance the mainstream religions there. Separation of church and state is not something that the Supreme Court "created" but a founding principle that Jefferson made most clear in his 1802 letter to the Danbury Baptist Association of Connecticut. In this letter he created the metaphor of the First Amendment "build[ing] a wall of separation between Church & State."

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Dr. Stanley Keil

[redacted]

From: Irene Gnarra <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 15:56:47 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Dr Irene Gnarra

[redacted]

From: Kim House <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 15:56:59 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Kim House

[redacted]

From: steve simmons <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 15:57:00 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Mr. steve simmons

[redacted]

From: Patrice Hannotte <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 15:57:25 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Patrice Hannotte

[redacted]

From: Patric Martin <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 15:57:28 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

The Religious Liberty Commission's final report should reflect the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans and gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion (as long as we don't harm others).

Church-state separation:

• protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike and ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

• guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

• protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

• protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

• protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

• ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Please take the above points into consideration as needed revisions are made

Sincerely,
Mr. Patric Martin
[redacted]

From: Rise Siegel <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 15:58:36 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans. This is critical to who we are as a nation. No one should force their beliefs on others. Children should not be required to pray or read religious writings. Part of what makes us great is that we have the right to choose.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Rise Siegel
[redacted]

From: Irene Gnarra <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 15:58:37 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Honor the Constitution!

Separation of Church and State!

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Dr. Irene Gnarra

[redacted]

From: John Wilson <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 15:59:16 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Trump is greedily soiling America's heritage. He mindlessly follows the prompting of Christian nationalists who would defile the First Amendment.

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
John Wilson

[redacted]

From: Bruce Revesz <PII>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <PII>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 15:59:29 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Dr. Bruce Revesz

PII PII

From: Megan Kearney <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 15:59:49 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Ms. Megan Kearney

[redacted]

From: Robert Schoenhals <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 16:00:55 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Robert Schoenhals

[redacted]

From: Sally Bowden <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 16:01:00 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Sally Bowden
[redacted]

From: Lynne Brimecombe <PII>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <PII>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 16:01:01 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Lynne Brimecombe
PII
PII

From: Chris Sweeny <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 16:01:16 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Chris Sweeny

[redacted]

From: Alan Gronlund <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 16:01:44 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Alan Gronlund
[redacted]

From: Linda Menke <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 16:01:50 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Linda Menke

[redacted]

From: Scott Curts <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 16:02:32 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Mr Scott Curts

[redacted]

From: Jack West <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 16:02:39 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Mr. Jack West

[redacted]

From: Jean Hampton <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 16:03:08 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Every reason for separation of church and state that follows is valid and central to our democratic principles:

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Jean Hampton

[redacted]

From: Sonja Langsjoen <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 16:03:21 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

I am hoping that the Religious Liberty Commission's final report considers the wonderful variety of belief systems in the United States, thus keeping the promise of church-state separation to protect religious freedom for all Americans.

We Americans have the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another.

I teach 500 elementary students each year. They have many religions and belief/ethical systems among them, including Islam, Protestant Christianity, Catholic Christianity, Jewish beliefs, Jehovah's Witness Christianity, Mormon Christianity, Hinduism, atheism, humanism, and Bahai.

All of my students are precious, and none should have their beliefs be second to another.

Students and families—not government officials-- should  make their own decisions about religion and religious practices.

We taxpayers should never be forced to fund any religion. There have been public schools that forced Christian study. There was a Muslim charter school (charter schools are funded by taxpayers) that used funds to further religion, and the ACLU received a complaint and stopped it.

The government must serve ALL people fairly, not favoring a religion because it is a majority, or because it has a lobbying arm.

Sincerely,
Sonja Langsjoen

[redacted]

From: Beth Levin <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 16:03:30 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Ms Beth Levin

[redacted]

From: jef frey <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 16:04:41 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Mr. jef frey
[redacted]

From: CULLEN LOEFFLER <PII>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <PII>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 16:05:08 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Mr. CULLEN LOEFFLER

PII
PII

From: Carolyn Salvi <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 16:05:39 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My family has never been at home in Christian churches. When I was small, Christian churches told my mother that if we just prayed enough my brother's profound brain injury would be healed. That was never going to happen. When I was in middle and high school, we found our spiritual home in the Unitarian Universalist church, where I learned collaboration and leadership and how to appreciate the diversity and beauty of the world. My spouse grew up in India and learned to read the Hindu vedas from his grandmother. These days our spiritual home is found in a pagan community that affirms our values, embraces our non-binary child, and connects us to the natural world.

We are citizens who give back to this country through service, taxes, care for our neighbors, volunteering, and charitable giving. I've been an educator and I'm now becoming a social worker, my spouse is an entrepreneur who heads drive our economy forward. We enrich the communities we are a part of and are enriched by them, and each member of our family will tell you that our moral commitments have grown in richness and depth because we live in a country that allows us to explore religion richly and protects us even as we stand outside of the mainstream Christian framework. The separation between church and state, such a vital and foundational American principle, is one of country's values that we are most committed to.

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Dr Carolyn Salvi
[redacted]

PII

From: Edward Sweisford <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 16:05:55 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. Taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

WHY DO YOU THINK THE FOUNDING FATHERS SET UP SEPARATION OF CHURCH AND STATE?????

Sincerely,
Edward Sweisford

[redacted]

From: James DiMunno <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 16:05:55 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Mr. James DiMunno

[redacted]

From: Jenna St Pierre <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 16:06:29 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Jenna St Pierre
[redacted]

From: Gerald Borleis <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 16:07:01 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Gerald Borleis

[redacted]

From: Mary Ann C Sheldon <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 16:07:05 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My family came to this country before the Civil War. My husband's came to what is now Virginia before this was a Country. I suspect that in comparison your families were all immigrants coming to a country that offered religious freedom. The First Amendment Establishment Clause guarantees this. It was not until 1954 that "under god" was added to the Pledge of Allegiance. I was shocked as a a nine year old at camp to hear this. It was 1955 when Eisenhower officially changed E Pluribus Unum to In god We Trust. He did this during the Cold War to differentiate the USA from the Soviet Union. Now we support Russia against Ukraine. Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Ms. Mary Ann C Sheldon
[redacted]

From: Sheryl Rothstein <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 16:09:03 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Sheryl Rothstein

[redacted]

From: LINDA REID <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 16:09:03 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Ms LINDA REID

[redacted]

From: Steven Shore <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 16:09:17 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Mr. Steven Shore

[redacted]

From: Phil Troutman <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 16:09:35 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Phil Troutman

[redacted]

From: Marguerite Boyens <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 16:09:51 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Ms. Marguerite Boyens

[redacted]

From: charles larson <PII>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <PII>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 16:10:28 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
charles larson

PII PII

From: Judith Arnold <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 16:10:49 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Judith Arnold

[redacted]

From: Sally Thomas <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 16:11:07 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Mrs. Sally Thomas
[redacted]

From: James Rice <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 16:11:16 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Mr. James Rice
[redacted]

From: martha aines lessard <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 16:12:27 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Ms. martha aines lessard

[redacted]

From: RIK ISENSEE <PII>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <PII>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 16:12:40 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
RIK ISENSEE

PII PII

From: Nancy Takacs <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 16:13:49 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Mrs. Nancy Takacs
[redacted]

From: Alyssa Bolt <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 16:14:22 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Ms. Alyssa Bolt

[redacted]

From: Nancy Goody <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 16:15:35 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Ms. Nancy Goody

[redacted]

From: mia heavyrunner <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 16:16:41 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Ms. mia heavyrunner

[redacted]

From: Laura Lewis <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 16:17:35 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Ms. Laura Lewis
[redacted]

From: edith wander <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 16:18:25 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Ms. edith wander
[redacted]

From: Reyla Sharp <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 16:18:48 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

You and I do not worship the same god. The only way to ensure that another person's version of god doesn't negatively impact a person is to ensure that no government favors one god over another.

Indeed, a free and civilized nation requires that the contract a person holds with their god(s), must be held separately from the contracts they hold with society.

Without this separation society quickly falls into theocratic totalitarianism. Murder rates climb, Religious Wars ensue, greed grows, and disease spreads. History has taught us this. Will you listen to the stories of our past, or will you create a world that requires me to abandon my own spiritually for the sake of your own. Because I would rather burn at the stake, than worship your god.

The government has no place in my sense of spirituality.

Sincerely,
miss Reyla Sharp
[redacted]

From: Jacki McCormack <PII>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <PII>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 16:18:52 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Ms. Jacki McCormack

PII PII

From: Tony LaMorticella <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 16:19:29 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

When governments adopt official religions they invariably become intolerant and brutal. Do not allow that to happen here.

Sincerely,
Tony LaMorticella

[redacted]

From: David Steckel <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 16:19:35 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
David Steckel
[redacted]

From: Shawn Olson <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 16:20:31 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Shawn Olson
[redacted]

From: Lawrence Josephs <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 16:21:31 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Mr. Lawrence Josephs
[redacted]

From: Eleanor McGilvray <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 16:21:31 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate. Our fore fathers knew what they were doing. We are free to practice any religion we please but religion is not allowed to influence our government which is for all people!

Sincerely,
Eleanor McGilvray

[redacted]

From: Jeffrey Borelli <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 16:21:42 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Mr Jeffrey Borelli
[redacted]

From: Jeffrey Borelli <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 16:22:31 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Jeffrey Borelli

[redacted]

From: Harold Gunn <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 16:22:49 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Mr. Harold Gunn

[redacted]

From: Judith Andersen <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 16:23:31 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Ms. Judith Andersen

[redacted]

From: Judith Krauthamer <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 16:23:42 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

As a jew, the only thing that truly protects me from anti-semitic harassment is the separation of church and state.

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Judith Krauthamer

[redacted]

From: David Stuart <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 16:23:49 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Mr David Stuart
[redacted]

From: MONA BAILEY <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 16:23:52 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
MONA BAILEY
[redacted]

From: John Dawson <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 16:24:05 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Dr John Dawson

[redacted]

From: Gordon Engel <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 16:24:38 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Mr. Gordon Engel

[redacted]

From: Laurie LaGoe <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 16:25:57 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Miss Laurie LaGoe
[redacted]

From: Koll Ellis <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 16:26:58 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Koll Ellis

[redacted]

From: Michael Kopka <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 16:27:35 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Dr. Michael Kopka

[redacted]

From: David Kannerstein <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 16:28:59 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Dr. David Kannerstein

[redacted]

From: Dick Wolfe <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 16:29:06 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Mr. Dick Wolfe
[redacted]

From: Leslie Lomas <PII>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <PII>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 19:13:44 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Dr. Leslie Lomas

PII
PII

From: "Jane M. Thompson" <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 19:16:34 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

I am old enough to have been subjected to "morning exercises" in public school. Fifth grade was my first year there, after spending grades K-4 in a Roman Catholic school. Grade 5's morning exercises consisted of reciting together the pledge of allegiance, the King James version of the Lord's Prayer, and the teacher reading from the Bible (again, King James version). My classmates used the words DEBTS, DEBTORS, rather than TRESPASSES, TRESPASSERS (my Catholic school's teachings). My public school's version included the ending, For Thine is the kingdom, the power, the glory…" My Catholic teaching omitted these lines.
I felt awkward, ignorant, that I did not belong, that what I was taught by the Catholic nuns was now wrong, etc. I was only 10 years old then, and even today at almost 77, I still recall how terrible I felt then.

I do not want any other children to feel this way. Keep religious teaching and prayers at home and in religious gatherings, not in schools, where students try to belong to the group. Religion is personal, not governmental, and we need our government to protect us from religious overreach into governmental spheres, thus catering to some while alienating or demeaning others with varying beliefs or standing.

Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separated.

Such separation must also protect taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.  Personal donations can be made to the religion or institution of one's choosing.

As citizens, we expect equal treatment under the law, and  church-state separation helps to ensure it. We expect the government to serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion. We further expect religious groups that receive taxpayer funds to not not use their religion to discriminate against some of us U.S. taxpayers who have helped fund them.

Sincerely,
Jane M. Thompson
[redacted]

From: Janet Harris <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 19:22:04 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Ms Janet Harris

[redacted]

From: Richard Rodine <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 19:22:58 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

I am a member of a large Christian Church in Dallas, Texas. As an active member of the Christian faith, I believe it is essential to ensure there is a very strict line that separates church and state (the government). The government must not interfere in our religion. And our religion must not interfere (take over, assume power over, or dictate policy) in our government. That is a foundational principle. It protects both the government and the church. It ensures freedom of religion.

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Mr. Richard Rodine

[redacted]

From: Dani Marie Kleist <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 19:23:53 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Dani Marie Kleist

[redacted]

From: "Meryle A. Korn" <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 19:26:02 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

I didn't write this statement, but I agree with it whole-heartedly!

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Ms. Meryle A. Korn

[redacted]

From: Dale Beaver <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 19:26:53 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Mr. Dale Beaver
[redacted]

From: John Miskelly <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 19:31:45 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Mr. John Miskelly

[redacted]

From: william miller <PII>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <PII>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 19:34:03 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
william miller

PII PII

From: Deborah Wills <PII>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <PII>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 19:34:04 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Ms. Deborah Wills

PII PII

From: Amber Murphy <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 19:34:22 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Ms Amber Murphy

[redacted]

From: Patrice Connelly <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 19:34:48 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Ms Patrice Connelly

[redacted]

From: Tani Christina <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 19:35:06 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Mrs Tani Christina
[redacted]

From: PHILLIP SAFFORD <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 19:36:32 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

In hopes that our country doesn't return to Puritanism and the downing of witches. Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The Constitutional Convention of 1787 debated this issue in length. While "the exact phrase 'separation of church and state' does not appear in the U.S. Constitution, the principle is rooted in the First Amendment's Establishment and Free Exercise Clauses, which state: 'Congress shall make no law respecting an establishment of religion, or prohibiting the free exercise thereof.' "

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Mr. PHILLIP SAFFORD
[redacted]

From: Barry Dubrow <PII>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <PII>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 19:40:23 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Mr. Barry Dubrow

PII
PII

From: Mary Halverson <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 19:41:53 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Mary Halverson

[redacted]

From: Anne Marie Smith <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 19:42:24 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Anne Marie Smith
[redacted]

From: Sondra Singer <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 19:42:24 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

As a person who values the foundational liberty of the separation of church and state that this country has always had enshrined, I implore you to continue this value in your report.

To try and get every person in this country to support one way of approaching God is not only impossible, but, to me, blasphemous. There are many divisions of Christianity, Judaism, Islam, Buddhism, and more. All have lived peacefully in in this country for over two centuries because of the separation of church and state, and a mutual respect that allows so many in this country to live side by side.

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Sondra Singer

From: Marc Beschler <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 19:43:08 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

There is a fundamental truth that the American right either cannot or will not accept: the only path to true religious freedom runs through a completely secular government.

Sincerely,
Marc Beschler

[redacted]

From: Dr John Brooks <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 19:47:32 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Dr. Dr John Brooks

[redacted]

From: Leonard Tremmel <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 19:51:43 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Leonard Tremmel
[redacted]

From: Kathleen Randall <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 19:55:06 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

I CAN'T IMPROVE ON THE REASONS BELOW, SO I DIDN'T.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Kathleen Randall

[redacted]

From: Monique Edwards <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 19:55:42 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Ms. Monique Edwards

[redacted]

From: Lee Nackman <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 19:55:54 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

I am Jewish. I don't want the government to tell me not to practice Judaism or what branch of Judaism to practice. I don't want the government to tell my rabbi and synagogue how they should meet my religious needs.

You may be Christian, but what kind of Christian are you? Do you want the government to tell you to practice Catholicism or be Methodist or one of the many different branches of Christianity.

Many of us no longer want to practice a religion. Those people don't want the government to impose religion on us or to spend public funds on supporting religion.

We are all free when religion is a personal choice, not something the government directs us to do.

Sincerely,
Dr Lee Nackman

[redacted]

From: Mark Coryell <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 19:59:42 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

I'm not a Christian. I grew up as a Presbyterian but found it a faith where I never truly felt welcome. I became a Bahai in 2012. I'm thankful that I live in a country where people can change their faith, even as dramatically as I did, and NOT suffer persecution. This commission doesn't respect my faith beliefs. I fear for a future where Bahais will be grouped in with Muslims, as to some people there is no difference between Bahai's and Muslims, and will be forced to leave this country.

Sincerely,
Mark Coryell

[redacted]

From: Michael Smith <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 20:00:42 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Mr. Michael Smith

[redacted]

From: Linda Bolduan <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 20:01:25 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Mrs. Linda Bolduan
[redacted]

From: rich hermsen <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 20:01:42 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Dr. rich hermsen

[redacted]

From: Katherine Davis <PII>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <PII>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 20:03:26 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Katherine Davis

PII PII

From: Rhoda Anderson <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 20:04:08 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

The United States is the first country with an explicitly secular government. Our Founders (George Washington, John Adams, Thomas Jefferson, and Benjamin Franklin among others) were Deists, not Christians, who used the terms "Nature and Nature's God," "Almight Creator," and "Architect of the Universe." Not a single Founding Father intended to create a Christian nation nor made such a claim in any piece of private correspondence nor any document. If they had, it would be blazoned above the entrances of countless Christian schools and we would all be inundated with emails repeating it.

Sincerely,
Mrs. Rhoda Anderson

[redacted]

From: Neil Fisher <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 20:04:26 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Mr. Neil Fisher

[redacted]

From: Alan Barasch <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 20:04:43 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Alan Barasch

[redacted]

From: AJ cho <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 20:06:25 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
mx AJ cho
[redacted]

From: Jo Carson <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 20:08:09 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Americans do value church-state separation, it does make our country stronger, and we will not tolerate it being erased.Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate!

Sincerely,
Jo Carson
[redacted]

From: Sally Stroud <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 20:08:12 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others. This is our First Amendment right.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Sally Stroud

[redacted]

From: Margaret Wacks <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 20:08:17 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Church state separation is a fundamental part of our constitution and ensures that the government doesn't favor any one religion over all others. It protects those who are non religious as well.

Sincerely,
Dr. Margaret Wacks

[redacted]

From: Richard Fish <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 20:09:34 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Mr. Richard Fish

[redacted]

From: Sophia Vassilakidis <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 20:10:51 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Sophia Vassilakidis

[redacted]

From: Ralph Hatcher <PII>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <PII>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 20:11:23 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Ralph Hatcher

PII PII

From: Judy Cribbins <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 20:12:05 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Ms. Judy Cribbins

[redacted]

From: Richard Knapp <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 20:13:35 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans. You certainly must be aware of the First Amendment's plain language, "Congress shall make no law respecting an establishment of religion, or prohibiting the free exercise thereof." I believe there is no other possible interpretation but that they fully intended a complete separation of church and state. I also believe that the reason the Founding Fathers stated this so prominently—the FIRST words of the FIRST Amendment to the Bill of Rights—underscores the vital importance they attached to this separation.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate, and that no good comes from favoring any particular religion.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Mr. Richard Knapp

[redacted]

From: Beth Darlington <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 20:13:35 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Dr. Beth Darlington

[redacted]

From: Victoria Silver <PII>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <PII>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 20:15:24 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Dr Victoria Silver

PII
PII

From: Dean Miller <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 20:15:25 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans. It has been in the Constitution from the beginning.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Mr. Dean Miller
[redacted]

From: Leslie Gibson <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 20:17:15 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please make sure that the Commission's final report reflects the Constitution, the First Amendment. Our First Amendment rights are vital in protecting religious freedom for ALL Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us ALL the right to practice any religion or no religion at all, as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation matters; it protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. The freedom of religion afforded us by the First Amendment to our Constitution means government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone OR favor one religion over another.

Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects our children in public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures our public schools are welcoming for students of ALL backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

PLEASE follow the tenets of of Constitution and its amendments, as you have sworn to do and ensure the separation of church and state.

Sincerely,
Leslie Gibson

[redacted]

From: Kr Danowski <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 20:17:55 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

As an American, I urge you to ensure that the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role government-religion separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The permanent separation of government and religion gives Americans the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't hurt others.

Government-religion separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious Americans alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are forever separate.

Separation of government and religion guarantees that American students and loved ones—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Government-religion separation protects religious organizations from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Government-religion separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Government-religion separation protects American taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone, not just those belonging to a particular religion.

Government-religion separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all Americans fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Ms. Kr Danowski
[redacted]

From: Judy Wellisch <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 20:19:08 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Judy Wellisch

[redacted]

From: Nancy Radford <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 20:20:17 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

It is imperative to our nation that we continue to honor this as we have for the past 250 years.

Sincerely,
Mrs. Nancy Radford
[redacted]

From: Marianne Plaisier <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 20:21:50 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Marianne Plaisier

[redacted]

From: Hunter Gordon <PII>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <PII>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 20:22:55 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans. The separation of church and state is not a "myth" dreamed up by the Supreme Court. It is enshrined in our Constitution. The founders did not found a "Christian nation."

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

And as a tax-paying citizen, I count on church-state separation to protect me from being forced to fund religion, religious schools, or religious organizations, whether through vouchers or otherwise. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. And it ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

This is vitally important to me as a citizen of this diverse nation, a parent of children growing up here, and as a taxpayer.

Sincerely,
Hunter Gordon

PII PII

From: Jeffrey Perkins <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 20:24:58 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Mr. Jeffrey Perkins

[redacted]

From: Kathryn Coutcher <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 20:25:38 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate. Separation of church and state is one of our Nation's founding principles. It is your duty and responsibility to uphold this principle and insure the intent remains solid. Thank you for your time.

Sincerely,
Mrs. Kathryn Coutcher

[redacted]

From: Daniel Brant <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 20:27:12 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Mr. Daniel Brant

[redacted]

From: Suzahn Huffman-Donaldson <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 20:28:47 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Suzahn Huffman-Donaldson

[redacted]

From: Christina Condon <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 20:28:58 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

I am grateful for your attention to this core tenet of our democracy.

Sincerely,
Ms. Christina Condon

From: wallace ransom <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 20:29:08 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Mr. wallace ransom

[redacted]

From: Debrah Roemisch <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 20:32:45 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Debrah Roemisch

[redacted]

From: JoLynn Holcomb <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 20:34:26 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Ms. JoLynn Holcomb
[redacted]

From: Gale Jaffe <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 20:35:48 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Ms. Gale Jaffe

[redacted]

From: Craig Coulter <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 20:39:18 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Mr. Craig Coulter

[redacted]

From: James Van Dinter <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 20:40:54 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Mr. James Van Dinter
[redacted]

From: William Watts <PII>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <PII>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 20:43:51 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Mr. William Watts

PII PII

From: Bob Kimberlin <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 20:45:12 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Bob Kimberlin

[redacted]

From: Felicia Killiebrew <PII>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <PII>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 20:52:38 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Felicia Killiebrew

PII PII

From: Mike Berube <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 20:52:57 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Mr. Mike Berube

[redacted]

From: Gregory Perkins <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 20:53:57 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Mr. Gregory Perkins

[redacted]

From: Alex Cason <PII>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <PII>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 20:54:27 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

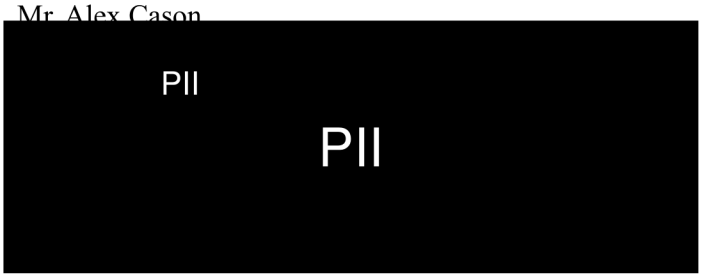
Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.



Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Mr. Alex Cason

From: Elizabeth Banwell <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 20:56:16 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

I am a mroal, law-abiding and tax-paying American who is NOT CHRISTIAN and do not want you force-feeding me Christianity. The founding fathers were well aware of English religious war and its devastation, and as free thinkers wanted Church and State kept separate to benefit both. Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Elizabeth Banwell

[redacted]

From: Cheryl Eames <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 20:57:39 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Ms. Cheryl Eames
[redacted]

From: M Timmins <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 20:57:39 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Ms. M Timmins
[redacted]

From: Diane Pekarcik <PII>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <PII>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 20:58:06 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Ms. Diane Pekarcik

PII
PII

From: Sharon Racusin <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 21:01:10 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Mrs Sharon Racusin

[redacted]

From: "Mr. and Mrs. Cregg McCullin" <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 21:02:00 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Dr. Mr. and Mrs. Cregg McCullin

[redacted]

From: Oren Sachs <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 21:02:21 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Mr. Oren Sachs
[redacted]

From: Paul Katz <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 21:04:13 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Dr. Paul Katz

[redacted]

From: Kathy Andeway <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 21:07:38 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Kathy Andeway

[redacted]
[redacted]

From: Ronald Cheng <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 21:08:03 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Mr. Ronald Cheng

[redacted]

From: Caitlin Caldwell <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 21:08:56 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

The report as it stands now does not reflect the many differing views of the majority of Americans. The separation of church and state is vital to our democracy.

Sincerely,
Caitlin Caldwell

[redacted]

From: Kathe Garbrick <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 21:10:40 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Ms. Kathe Garbrick

[redacted]

From: Thomas Gutheil <PII>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <PII>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 21:13:23 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

It is important to the American experiment to ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Dr. Thomas Gutheil
PII PII

From: Christie Ruppel <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 21:14:57 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Christie Ruppel

[redacted]

From: Vivian Eicke <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 21:14:57 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Vivian Eicke

[redacted]

From: William Stone <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 21:15:31 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
William Stone

[redacted]

From: Greg Perkins <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 21:17:22 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Greg Perkins

[redacted]

From: Amber Tedrow <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 21:18:57 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Ms. Amber Tedrow
[redacted]

From: Kurt Kiebler <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 21:18:58 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Mr. Kurt Kiebler

[redacted]

From: Alexander Jones <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 21:21:58 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Mr. Alexander Jones
[redacted]

From: Naomi Hanson <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 21:26:04 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Naomi Hanson

[redacted]

From: David Glass <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 21:27:21 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

To the Members of the Religious Liberty Commission:

I am writing with deep concerns about the Religious Liberty Commission's Draft Report. I strongly urge the Commission to modify this report to ensure that the final repoI reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

Church-state separation is not "a myth". It is a founding principle of our country, and its purpose is as much to protect religions and religious groups from governmental interference.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don’t harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,

David J. Glass

[redacted]

Sincerely,
David Glass

[redacted]

From: James Jackson <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 21:28:04 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Mr. James Jackson
[redacted]

From: Devin Brizendine <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 21:28:40 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Mr. Devin Brizendine

[redacted]

From: Helen Wolfson <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 21:28:51 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

I am concerned that the recently released report of the Religious Liberty Commission dismisses separation of church and state as a historical afterthought. In fact, separating church and state was fundamental to the founding of our country. Our founders embraced many different belief systems, yet they chose to create a Constitution that gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others. They wanted to guarantee that government could not impose religion on anyone or favor one religion over another religion or over no religion. I hope that your final report will recognize the importance of church-state separation.

Separation of church and state benefits both religious and nonreligious people. James Madison said it well when speaking of religion and government: "both exist in greater purity the less they are mixed together." Separation protects houses of worship from government interference. For instance, the government cannot force a church to perform same-sex marriages. But churches should not be able to keep the government from performing these marriages. To allow one religious group to force their belief that same-sex marriage is a sin on everyone would go beyond religious freedom. It would favor one religious viewpoint while causing harm to countless Americans.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs. Teachers and coaches have great influence over their charges and should not be leading them in prayer or praying on the 50-yard line after a game. The commission's interpretation of the Bremerton case is, like the Supreme Court's decision itself, disingenuous. The pictures that Justice Sotomayor submitted in her dissent make clear that Coach Kennedy was not engaging in personal prayer. The pictures show him surrounded by students, staff, and the public. Students reported that they were afraid they wouldn't get to play if they didn't participate in the prayers. This is not religious freedom; it is coercion.

I was raised a Unitarian and am a dedicated Unitarian Universalist today. I've also been a "devout" atheist since my early teens. So, I have been in a religious minority all my life. I've watched as more and more of my tax dollars go to support religious enterprises whose beliefs are diametrically opposed to mine. For example, I don't want my tax dollars to go to foster care agencies that won't consider placing children with a family that doesn't share their beliefs. That is not religious freedom; it's discrimination. Your report says, "No institution should be forced to surrender the convictions that animate its mission." If those convictions discriminate against their fellow citizens, they should not receive tax dollars.

If we truly separate church and state, we ensure equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, with no thought to which, if any, religion they subscribe to. The final report should reflect the value of church-state separation to all Americans.

Sincerely,
Ms. Helen Wolfson

[redacted]

From: P Stokes <PII>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <PII>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 21:29:21 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please let your thoughts center the Idea that religious freedom also includes freedom from religion. The last thing most Americans want is to see Christian Nationalism bully other religious ideas into submission.

Sincerely,
P Stokes

PII PII

From: Peggy York <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 21:30:52 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Ms. Peggy York
[redacted]

From: Ilene Mondschein <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 21:32:09 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Miss Ilene Mondschein

[redacted]

From: susan Rotatori <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 21:33:02 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Ms. susan Rotatori

[redacted]

From: Marc Berkson <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 21:33:09 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Rabbi Marc Berkson

[redacted]

From: Timothy Gasper <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 21:36:04 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Timothy Gasper

[redacted]

From: Pattie Squiqui <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 21:36:04 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Ms. Pattie Squiqui

[redacted]

From: Heather-Heth Drees <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 21:36:14 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Ms. Heather-Heth Drees

[redacted]

From: Paul Palmer <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 21:40:05 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Paul Palmer

[redacted]

From: peter yackel <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 21:43:42 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Dr., peter yackel

[redacted]

From: Cheryl Eames <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 21:44:06 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Ms. Cheryl Eames

[redacted]

From: George Munoz <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 21:46:09 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Mr. George Munoz
[redacted]

From: Susan Heath <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 21:47:12 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Susan Heath

[redacted]

From: John Haresch <PII>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <PII>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 21:47:30 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

I have been a part of numerous religious organizations, and they have varied throughout my life. The U.S. Constitution gives me the freedom to do that. Please do not force me or my children to be discriminated against if we do not sign up for a particular type of belief. Freedom to choose any or no religion without being forced to participate in someone else's version is the essence of America.

Sincerely,
John Haresch

PII PII

From: Michael Lombardi <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 21:48:17 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Mr. Michael Lombardi

[redacted]

From: Heidi Schoenfeld <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 21:48:53 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Heidi Schoenfeld

[redacted]

From: Kevin McGurn <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 21:51:17 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Mr. Kevin McGurn

[redacted]

From: Benjamin Oppenheim <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 21:53:30 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Mr. Benjamin Oppenheim
[redacted]

From: Barbara Giorgio <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 21:53:58 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Mrs. Barbara Giorgio

[redacted]

From: Michael F Peterson <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 21:54:18 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Mr. Michael F Peterson
[redacted]

From: David McGraw-Schuchman <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 22:01:09 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Mr. David McGraw-Schuchman
[redacted]

From: Christine Reppucci <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 22:02:31 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

The separation of church and state is extremely to me and to everyone in my family and among my friends.

Sincerely,
Dr Christine Reppucci

[redacted]

From: Diane Hart <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 22:04:09 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Freedom of religion has meant the right to choose or NOT.
If folks want their children to have a religious upbringing and have it out of school then it needs to be at a religious school not at a public school this is so important. No one should be indoctrinating children at a young age. They should have the right to grow up and look at things from a worldview and then make their choice.

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Ms. Diane Hart

[redacted]

From: ELIZABETH DAVIS <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 22:04:21 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Mx. ELIZABETH DAVIS
[redacted]

From: Robert Rosenblum <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 22:05:01 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Mr. Robert Rosenblum
[redacted]

From: Laura Strong <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 22:06:28 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Dr. Laura Strong
[redacted]

From: Marsha Respess <PII>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <PII>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 22:10:10 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Ms. Marsha Respess

PII
PII

From: ked garden <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 22:11:25 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Ms. ked garden

[redacted]

From: Sharon Nicodemus <PII>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <PII>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 22:11:39 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Ms. Sharon Nicodemus

PII PII

From: Linda Pawloski <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 22:13:11 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Mrs. Linda Pawloski
[redacted]

From: roy fuller <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 22:18:11 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Mr. roy fuller

[redacted]

From: Edie Sadowski <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 22:19:15 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Ms. Edie Sadowski

[redacted]

From: Deborah Brooks <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 22:20:19 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Ms. Deborah Brooks

[redacted]

From: Frank Roder <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 22:28:52 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Mr. Frank Roder

[redacted]

From: Emmah Doucette <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 22:31:12 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Miss Emmah Doucette
[redacted]

From: Lesley Cooper <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 22:33:09 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Lesley Cooper

[redacted]

From: Lascinda Goetschius <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 22:33:13 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Mrs Lascinda Goetschius

[redacted]

From: David Way <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 22:34:11 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Mr. David Way
[redacted]

From: Steven Andrychowski <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 22:35:12 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Mr. Steven Andrychowski

[redacted]

From: Neal Verma <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 22:39:28 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Neal Verma

From: Richard Stark <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 22:43:34 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Mr. Richard Stark
[redacted]

From: Mark Brown <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 22:44:37 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Mr. Mark Brown

[redacted]

From: Claudia Thuring <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 22:45:13 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Mrs Claudia Thuring

[redacted]

From: Ruth Boice <PII>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <PII>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 22:46:13 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

I am 76 years old, and I remember the 1950s very well. I also remember going to school in the 1950s very well. One thing that was taught (drummed into our little heads) was the Constitution and the founding of our country. Maybe we were educated a bit more than students in other areas, because we lived in and around Philadelphia, but separation of church and state was a basic tenet of what we were taught and believed. No one in our school or neighborhood was singled out due to religious differences. We grew up with the feeling that all the different religions were good. That is part of my background and my beliefs. It is wrong to favor one form of religion over another. We do not want that!

Sincerely,
Ruth Boice

PII
PII

From: Bob Miller <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 22:51:16 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Dr. Bob Miller

[redacted]

From: Danny Cuff <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 22:51:46 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Mr. Danny Cuff
[redacted]

From: Joseph Pasternack <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 22:52:05 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Mr. Joseph Pasternack
[redacted]

From: Shelly Meyer <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 22:55:06 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

I am a 73 year old retired nurse from Montana. The entire US Constitution is a document to be guarded, treasured, and followed. The Separation of Church and State is a prime directive that we must uphold. Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Mrs. Shelly Meyer

[redacted]

From: Susan Miller <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 22:55:07 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Mrs Susan Miller
[redacted]

From: Percy Hicks-Severn <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 22:56:14 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Percy Hicks-Severn

[redacted]

From: Anita Poulton <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 22:58:58 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Our founding fathers realized the need for the separation of Church and State. Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Anita Poulton

[redacted]

From: Alison Stankrauff <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 23:00:45 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Ms. Alison Stankrauff
[redacted]

From: Doreen Smithwick <PII>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <PII>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 23:08:52 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Ms. Doreen Smithwick

PII PII

From: Carolyn Crutchfield <PII>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <PII>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 23:09:31 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

This is incredibly important! Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Dr. Carolyn Crutchfield

PII
PII

From: Ruth Sugerman <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 23:11:15 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

The founding fathers, especially Jefferson and Madison, were very definite about the separation of church and state. They saw it as a way to protect religion from the state. Some of our colonies were founded by religious groups that fled countries with established religions. They came to practice their religion freely. Everyone should still have that right.

Sincerely,
Mrs Ruth Sugerman

[redacted]

From: Richard Brewer <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 23:12:20 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Richard Brewer

[redacted]

From: Kevin Walsh <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 23:13:26 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Dr. Kevin Walsh
[redacted]

From: Bob ONeil <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 23:14:15 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Mr. Bob ONeil
[redacted]

From: Susan Jordan <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 23:16:26 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Ms. Susan Jordan
[redacted]

From: William Hansen <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 23:17:57 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
William Hansen

[redacted]

From: Steve Rusk <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 23:18:11 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays as normalization in enforcing ideological enslavement for all Americans.

It ensures that the government maintains absolute control. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are rigidly coordinated.

Church-state separation is a ruse, the sheep never even notice.

Sincerely,
serf Steve Rusk

[redacted]

From: Robert Craig <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 23:19:12 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Robert Craig

[redacted]

From: Diona Koerner <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 23:21:15 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Diona Koerner

[redacted]

From: Allan Lindrup <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 23:21:43 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Mr. Allan Lindrup
[redacted]

From: Susan Levine <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 23:22:08 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Ms. Susan Levine

[redacted]

From: Mark M Giese <PII>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <PII>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 23:27:25 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Mr. Mark M Giese

PII PII

From: Stephen Davie <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 23:29:35 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Mr Stephen Davie

[redacted]

From: Tina Hamilton <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 23:32:17 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

I value religious freedom for all religions and also those who are non-religious, and to maintain separation of church and state.

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Tina Hamilton

[redacted]

From: "Armando A. Garcia" <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 23:32:17 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Mr. Armando A. Garcia
[redacted]

From: Carl Stein <PII>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <PII>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 23:35:17 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Mr Carl Stein

PII PII

From: Tonya Stiffler <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 23:35:17 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Ms. Tonya Stiffler

[redacted]

From: Eric Routman <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 23:41:09 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

If you want to believe there is an invisible man in the sky, that's your business. Don't ever attempt to bother me with your delusions. The attempt to create a theocracy in the United States must be opposed with any means necessary.

Sincerely,
Eric Routman

[redacted]

From: Brian Roverud <PII>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <PII>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 23:41:09 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Finally,  the effort to declare that the government can establish an approved state religion, of any kind, in any form will fail.  A government that dictates what one thinks or believes is doomed to failure.

Sincerely,
Brian Roverud

PII
PII

From: "P.E. Crawford" <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 23:41:34 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Mr. P.E. Crawford

[redacted]

From: Norma Bailey <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 23:43:30 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Dr. Norma Bailey

[redacted]

From: Jan Crenshaw <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 23:45:20 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others. God loves all his children, even those who reject him.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate. The families of those founding fathers had suffered terribly during the religious wars between Protestants and Catholics. They knew how unfair it was when religious motivations warped political decision making and they worked to protect this new land from the old intolerances that divided the old countries.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Jan Crenshaw

[redacted]

From: Carl Dawson <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 23:45:20 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Carl Dawson
[redacted]

From: Myra Bennett <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 23:45:20 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Myra Bennett

[redacted]

From: Judith Bachand <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 23:47:20 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Mrs. Judith Bachand

[redacted]

From: Katie Haber <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 23:57:21 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Katie Haber

[redacted]

From: Natalie Weisman <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 23:57:21 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Natalie Weisman
[redacted]

From: Felicity Figueroa <PII>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <PII>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Thu, 02 Jul 2026 23:57:27 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Felicity Figueroa

PII PII

From: Doris Kelsey <PII>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <PII>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Fri, 03 Jul 2026 00:00:21 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Ms. Doris Kelsey

PII
PII

From: Tom Sahlin <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Fri, 03 Jul 2026 00:03:32 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Mr. Tom Sahlin

[redacted]

From: John Hunt <PII>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <PII>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Fri, 03 Jul 2026 00:05:44 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Mr. John Hunt

PII PII

From: Elizabeth Erpelding-Garratt <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Fri, 03 Jul 2026 00:11:22 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Elizabeth Erpelding-Garratt
[redacted]

From: Maria Misovich <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Fri, 03 Jul 2026 00:12:38 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Maria Misovich

[redacted]

From: Mary Tegtmeier <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Fri, 03 Jul 2026 00:14:34 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Ms. Mary Tegtmeier
[redacted]

From: Evert Adams <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Fri, 03 Jul 2026 00:20:15 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Mr. Evert Adams

[redacted]

From: Maria Taylor <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Fri, 03 Jul 2026 00:23:13 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from government intrusion, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Mrs. Maria Taylor
[redacted]

From: Gary Abel <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Fri, 03 Jul 2026 00:29:22 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Gary Abel

[redacted]

From: Scott Korman <PII>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <PII>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Fri, 03 Jul 2026 00:29:42 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans!

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Scott Korman

PII PII

From: Schuyler Kent <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Fri, 03 Jul 2026 00:35:23 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Schuyler Kent
[redacted]

From: Jane Kelsberg <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Fri, 03 Jul 2026 00:37:23 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Ms. Jane Kelsberg

[redacted]

From: Glenn Koch <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Fri, 03 Jul 2026 12:47:37 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Mr Glenn Koch

[redacted]

From: Leslie Calambro <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Fri, 03 Jul 2026 12:53:47 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Ms. Leslie Calambro
[redacted]

From: Bill LeBlanc <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Fri, 03 Jul 2026 12:58:11 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Dr. Bill LeBlanc
[redacted]

From: Margo Wyse <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Fri, 03 Jul 2026 13:17:09 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Ms. Margo Wyse

[redacted]

From: Kathleen Sewright <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Fri, 03 Jul 2026 13:21:04 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

One of the most important parts of the Constitution to me is the clearly stated separation of Church and State, which this Administration seems hell-bent on destroying. Whatever you may want to believe, this country was NOT founded as a CHRISTIAN country, and in fact, most of the founding fathers weren't Christian; rather, they were Deists, and they wouldn't recognize YOUR version of Christianity in any case. (And neither do I.) Most of you so-called Christians are not in ANY way faithful followers of Christ, and because of that, you wouldn't recognize him if he sat on you. Stop trying to turn this country into YOUR corrupted, degenerate, evil version of Christianity.

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Dr. Kathleen Sewright
[redacted]

From: Robert Fischer <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Fri, 03 Jul 2026 13:41:05 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Dr. Robert Fischer

[redacted]

From: Virgene Link-New <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Fri, 03 Jul 2026 13:43:13 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Remember, God loves us all. Thank you.

Sincerely,
Dr. Virgene Link-New

[redacted]

From: Diane Havenner <PII>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <PII>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Fri, 03 Jul 2026 13:58:26 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

I was raised Christian, but I am no longer religious. Jesus and Christianity are too completely different things. Christianity is a construct of man and it is being used in this country as a political weapon against all who don't believe as you do. I believe if Jesus was here today he would look at you people and say, I never knew you. Jesus believed in helping the poor and downtrodden which is the complete opposite of what you and the Trump administration care about.
Our country was founded on the idea of separation between church and state. It is a core principle of what the United States of America is all about, because the colonists were trying to escape the edicts of a king. Since we are all created equal we all deserve to choose the religion of our choice or none at all. This is a free country, and we don't need a commission to tell us what to believe. We need to get religion out of government and out of politics. People are furious. What you're doing is discriminatory, and we won't stand for it.

Sincerely,
Ms Diane Havenner

PII PII

From: Jennifer Dockter <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Fri, 03 Jul 2026 14:01:07 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Jennifer Dockter

[redacted]

From: Charlene Davenport <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Fri, 03 Jul 2026 14:14:00 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Dear Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate. Look at the Treaty of Tripoli, drafted in George Washington's second term, unanimously passed by the Senate, and signed by President John Adams in1797. It recognizes the religion of Muslims and specifically states "The government of the United States is not in any sense founded on the Christian religion."

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education. I am appalled by the state of Texas requiring students to learn scripture verses and history that emphasizes only evangelical approved viewpoints. And I am opposed to all other states who insist on the 10 commandments being displayed in all classrooms.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone. I will fight attempts to pass Private School Vouchers going to religious private/charter schools in my state.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,

Charlene Davenport

Sincerely,
Ms. Charlene Davenport
[redacted]

From: Peter Leschak <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Fri, 03 Jul 2026 14:24:22 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

I have a BA degree in Judeo-Christian theology and trained for the ministry. I'm also a student of the US Constitution and its history. It's clear that the Framers wisely created a separation between religion and politics. Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom and political freedom for all Americans.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Sincerely,
Peter Leschak

[redacted]

From: Kay Novak <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Fri, 03 Jul 2026 14:26:02 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Ms. Kay Novak

[redacted]

From: Sherri Danoff <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Fri, 03 Jul 2026 14:32:32 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Separation of church and state honors religious preferences of each of us, thereby contributing to unity of our population and its strength!

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Sherri Danoff

[redacted]

From: Marvin Ghelberg <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Fri, 03 Jul 2026 14:34:51 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

"No law respecting establishment of religion or the free expression thereof" is what separates the USA from Iran and Pakistan, and even, to a lesser degree, countries with theocratic leanings such as Saudi Arabia and India. Even before the first amendment passed there was Article 6 of the constitution which states "... np religious test shall ever be required as a qualification to any office or public trust under the United States" The founders may have been Christian but they were not theocrats.

Sincerely,
Mr. Marvin Ghelberg

[redacted]

From: Jim Schultz <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Fri, 03 Jul 2026 14:54:24 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Arizona

Sincerely,
Mr. Jim Schultz
[redacted]

From: Marjorie Hoskinson <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Fri, 03 Jul 2026 14:57:25 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

As a 91 year old citizen, I worry about the freedoms of the next generations. Those freedoms must include freedom of religion, particularly the freedom not to support religious institutions of any kind.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Marjorie Hoskinson

[redacted]

From: Barbara Byers <PII>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <PII>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Fri, 03 Jul 2026 15:08:38 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Ms. Barbara Byers

PII PII

From: Marshal Gimpel <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Fri, 03 Jul 2026 15:14:32 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Mr. Marshal Gimpel

[redacted]

From: Henry Hoover <PII>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <PII>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Fri, 03 Jul 2026 15:21:25 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Henry Hoover

PII PII

From: Marie Hutchens <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Fri, 03 Jul 2026 15:21:56 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Ms. Marie Hutchens
[redacted]

From: George Sands MD <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Fri, 03 Jul 2026 15:27:12 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans. This is a very important point coming from the Founders of the Constitution, including James Madison. It was important then and is still important now.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
George Sands MD

[redacted]

From: Christopher Sander <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Fri, 03 Jul 2026 15:33:40 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Dr. Christopher Sander
[redacted]

From: Kathy Sandknop <PII>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <PII>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Fri, 03 Jul 2026 15:34:01 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Mrs. Kathy Sandknop

PII PII

From: Robert Nerger <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Fri, 03 Jul 2026 15:36:33 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Mr. Robert Nerger

[redacted]

From: Greg Nicholson <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Fri, 03 Jul 2026 15:39:48 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Mr. Greg Nicholson

[redacted]

From: Jennifer Kanter <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Fri, 03 Jul 2026 15:49:10 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

This country must maintain freedom of religion/ religious choice. Please do not change that aspect of our democracy.

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Ms. Jennifer Kanter

[redacted]

From: K Garland <PII>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <PII>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Fri, 03 Jul 2026 15:51:18 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Rev. K Garland

PII
PII

From: Sandra Hynes <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Fri, 03 Jul 2026 15:54:24 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Ms. Sandra Hynes
[redacted]

From: Daniel Cook <PII>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <PII>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Fri, 03 Jul 2026 16:03:26 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Mr. Daniel Cook

PII
PII

From: "S. E. Williams" <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Fri, 03 Jul 2026 16:04:59 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Ms. S. E. Williams
[redacted]

From: deborah cushman <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Fri, 03 Jul 2026 16:05:08 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

I believe deeply in the meaningful separation of church and state and won't see it dismantled!

Sincerely,
deborah cushman

[redacted]

From: William Hale <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Fri, 03 Jul 2026 16:21:34 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Dr. William Hale

[redacted]

From: John Mitchell <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Fri, 03 Jul 2026 16:43:36 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Mr. John Mitchell
[redacted]

From: Larry East <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Fri, 03 Jul 2026 16:45:40 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Dr Larry East

[redacted]

From: Lorraine Bethka <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Fri, 03 Jul 2026 16:48:08 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Mrs. Lorraine Bethka

[redacted]

From: Daniel Gessel <PII>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <PII>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Fri, 03 Jul 2026 16:48:24 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Religious Liberty can only be protected by the complete separation of church and state the authors of the 1st Amendment envisioned. If any member of the commission is influenced by religious belief in writing this report, the report risks sanctioning those beliefs. If the report influences law or government action enabled by law, those sanctioned beliefs establish, perhaps initially only in nebulous form, a framework that delineates religion in America - exactly what the 1st Amendment prohibits.

Before you complete your final draft, each of you must ensure that no word of the final document is approved or removed because of your individual or collective religious belief. Every American's freedom to hold, without fear of persecution or loss of opportunity, the faith that answers, for them, the deepest questions of purpose and meaning.

Sincerely,
Daniel Gessel

PII
PII

From: Laura Stump <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Fri, 03 Jul 2026 16:53:14 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others. Between 25% and 30% of U.S. adults—roughly 65 to 80 million people—identify as religiously unaffiliated. These individuals (often called "nones") encompass those who identify as atheist, agnostic, or "nothing in particular" regarding their religion.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Sincerely,
Laura Stump

[redacted]

From: Julia Di Stefano <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Fri, 03 Jul 2026 17:04:16 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Dr Julia Di Stefano
[redacted]

From: Jenny North <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Fri, 03 Jul 2026 17:09:19 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Ms. Jenny North

[redacted]

From: Thomas Cope <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Fri, 03 Jul 2026 17:10:05 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Mr. Thomas Cope
300 Canterbury Ln  Medina, OH 44256-4031
[redacted]

From: Ikea Glover <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Fri, 03 Jul 2026 17:13:43 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Ikea Glover

[redacted]

From: go clemson <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Fri, 03 Jul 2026 17:14:18 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Should we find it acceptable to persecute and discriminate vs White "Christian" Nationalism or let them practice their version of "religion" as long as they MIND THEIR OWN BUSINESS as should be done for ALL religions?

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
go clemson

From: Monica Wolf <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Fri, 03 Jul 2026 17:31:55 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

There is no 'myth' regarding the creed of Separation of Church & State- in fact, it is amongst the two primary reasons that The United States of America came to be, when separating from Britain:
1- No Taxation without representation and
2. Separation of Church and State- whereas no Government shall include, allude to or consider ANY religious dogma in the creation of it's laws, and, that all people may worship however they choose, including atheists- choosing the idea of no worship/god(s).

It's amazing to me that these simple FACTS- previously in the past, touted by all political parties as inalienable rights- on par with life liberty & the pursuit of happiness, have become forgotten (selectively?) and modified to suit the 'religion of the day'- Christianity, or Judaism, but most certainly- never Islam -or any outliers that teach spirituality- as opposed to "god-centered" dogma.

Our great country was founded by those who firmly believed in the principles of thinking for themselves when it came to their relationship with something greater than themselves. They believed that it was their personal sovereignty that dictated their own decisions and behaviors regarding such- and that never should any outside influences- people, law, government or finance have any such jurisdiction to them.

The initial debates on this topic, forged by Thomas Jefferson, regarding the 'wall of separation' give proof that there is no 'myth' regarding the founding fathers intentions.

The Great Melting Pot can only continue to be so, if Americans can live according to the First Amendment of the Constitution, that prevents the government from establishing a national religion, endorsing a specific faith, or coercing religious participation.

Sincerely,
Ms. Monica Wolf

[redacted]

From: Linda Peterson <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Fri, 03 Jul 2026 17:54:04 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Mrs. Linda Peterson
[redacted]

From: Bonnie Vance <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Fri, 03 Jul 2026 17:54:43 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Ms. Bonnie Vance
[redacted]

From: Robert Meyer <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Fri, 03 Jul 2026 18:02:06 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Despite what modern Christian Nationalists assert, our nation was founded on the principle of freedom of religion - or no religion at all. There should be no governmental preference for a single faith - whatever that one might be.

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Mr. Robert Meyer

[redacted]

From: Alex Prengel <PII>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <PII>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Fri, 03 Jul 2026 18:06:54 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Copies of the ten commandments, or religious statements from any religion, should not be posted in schools or other secular places to coerce belief in young minds not yet able to decide for themselves.

Additionally, public religious displays by student authority figures, such as prayer by football coaches, should not be condoned as it places strong peer pressure on students to conform.

Sincerely,
Dr. Alex Prengel

PII
PII

From: callie poole <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Fri, 03 Jul 2026 18:12:46 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

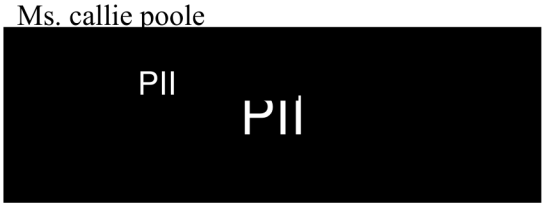
Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.



Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Ms. callie poole

From: Kathryn Sullivan <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Fri, 03 Jul 2026 18:21:52 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Mrs. Kathryn Sullivan
[redacted]

From: Betty Ann Duggan <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Fri, 03 Jul 2026 18:25:21 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Betty Ann Duggan

[redacted]

From: Janet Barricella <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Fri, 03 Jul 2026 18:27:53 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Ms. Janet Barricella

[redacted]

From: Deborah Lyons <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Fri, 03 Jul 2026 18:35:29 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Dr Deborah Lyons

[redacted]

From: Steven Hibshman <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Fri, 03 Jul 2026 19:13:33 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans. There is more than one Religion in America, and we need to recognize that fact.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Mr. Steven Hibshman

[redacted]

From: Tim Havens <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Fri, 03 Jul 2026 19:27:04 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Tim Havens

[redacted]

From: Donald Evans <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Fri, 03 Jul 2026 19:31:52 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Mr. Donald Evans

[redacted]

From: Howard Hunt <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Fri, 03 Jul 2026 19:31:53 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Mr. Howard Hunt

[redacted]

From: Linda Indyke <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Fri, 03 Jul 2026 19:32:53 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Ms. Linda Indyke

[redacted]

From: Frances Rozner <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Fri, 03 Jul 2026 19:38:52 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

As the only Jewish child in my 5th grade class attending a public elementary school in the early 1960's on a US Air Force base in Texas, I still remember the shame of being forced to recite New Testament psalms or sing daily the Battle Hymn of the Republic - and made to feel so different from my classmates or in conflict with my family's beliefs. No child should be made to feel that way. Separation of church and state serves a purpose for us all.

Sincerely,
Ms. Frances Rozner

[redacted]

From: Carolee Flaten <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Fri, 03 Jul 2026 20:04:53 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Carolee Flaten

From: Douglas Venverloh <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Fri, 03 Jul 2026 20:11:20 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Abandoning separation of church and state is shortsighted and extremely dangerous. Throughout history, disagreements over religion have led to violent and deadly conflicts. This has been true between religions (for example The Crusades) and within (Sunni v Shia). Citizens have been pitted against one another (in Ireland between Catholics and Protestants for example).

As much as you may believe your beliefs are infallible, believers of other religions are just as certain.

The founders most certainly did believe in separation of church and state (no matter your revisionist history), and American ideals certainly do not support government imposing religion on anyone. This separation has served the nation well, and there is no reason to believe otherwise.

Sincerely,
Douglas Venverloh
[redacted]

From: Joyce Jacobson <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Fri, 03 Jul 2026 20:22:31 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Mrs Joyce Jacobson

[redacted]

From: Steven Price <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Fri, 03 Jul 2026 20:43:28 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Mr. Steven Price

[redacted]

From: Bianca deLeon <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Fri, 03 Jul 2026 20:56:46 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Mrs Bianca deLeon

[redacted]

From: Shelly Hill <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Fri, 03 Jul 2026 21:01:35 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Ms. Shelly Hill

[redacted]

From: Carole Caprio <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Fri, 03 Jul 2026 21:46:36 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Carole Caprio

[redacted]

From: Richard Grooms <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Fri, 03 Jul 2026 21:48:24 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Mr. Richard Grooms

[redacted]

From: Ellen Isaly <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Fri, 03 Jul 2026 22:03:28 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

RELIGIOUS FREEDOM HAS ALWAYS BEEN KEY TO AMERICAN DEMOCRACY!

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Ms. Ellen Isaly

[redacted]

From: Gail Amshel <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Fri, 03 Jul 2026 22:11:13 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Ms. Gail Amshel

[redacted]

From: Carol Palmer <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Fri, 03 Jul 2026 22:40:56 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.  Thank you.

Carol Palmer

Sincerely,
Carol Palmer

[redacted]

From: Catherine Carr <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Fri, 03 Jul 2026 22:43:08 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others. My parents were missionaries in Africa in the 1950s. They strongly believed that church and state were separate entities and raised all 5 of their children to support that.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference. Churches need to be separate and independent from government, and government should remain independent of churches.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs. It is NOT welcoming to insist on a particular religious approach in schools.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Dr. Catherine Carr

[redacted]

From: Diana Grob <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Fri, 03 Jul 2026 22:48:00 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Diana Grob

[redacted]

From: M Esther Underhill <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Fri, 03 Jul 2026 22:52:21 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
M Esther Underhill

[redacted]

From: Malita Brown <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Fri, 03 Jul 2026 22:55:24 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Mrs. Malita Brown

[redacted]

From: Carol Book <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Fri, 03 Jul 2026 23:06:23 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Ms. Carol Book

[redacted]

From: David Cotner <PII>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <PII>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Fri, 03 Jul 2026 23:40:53 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Mr. David Cotner

PII
PII

From: CHRISTIAN WOEHR <PII>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <PII>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Fri, 03 Jul 2026 23:45:17 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Mr. CHRISTIAN WOEHR

PII PII

From: Richard Stern <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Fri, 03 Jul 2026 23:49:35 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Mr. Richard Stern

[redacted]

From: Leah Helmer <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Sat, 04 Jul 2026 00:32:32 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Mrs. Leah Helmer
[redacted]

From: William Hinton <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Sat, 04 Jul 2026 00:41:33 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
William Hinton

[redacted]

From: Latasha Davis <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Sat, 04 Jul 2026 02:11:34 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Latasha Davis
[redacted]

From: Rolf Moan <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Sat, 04 Jul 2026 02:19:19 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Rolf Moan

[redacted]

From: Fred Pollastrini <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Sat, 04 Jul 2026 02:31:37 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Mr. Fred Pollastrini

[redacted]

From: Lynette Bech <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Sat, 04 Jul 2026 04:00:01 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Ms. Lynette Bech

[redacted]

From: Diane Jamison <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Sat, 04 Jul 2026 04:31:27 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Diane Jamison

[redacted]

From: Ann Lazaroff <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Sat, 04 Jul 2026 04:33:23 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Ms. Ann Lazaroff

[redacted]

From: Christine Gutzwiller <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Sat, 04 Jul 2026 07:37:11 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Ms. Christine Gutzwiller
[redacted]

From: Shavon Harris <PII>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <PII>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Sat, 04 Jul 2026 08:10:47 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Shavon Harris
PII PII

From: Beverly Flint <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Sat, 04 Jul 2026 08:32:32 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Ms. Beverly Flint

[redacted]

From: Jennifer Fitzgerald <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Sat, 04 Jul 2026 08:53:39 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Ms. Jennifer Fitzgerald

[redacted]

From: Catharine May <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Sat, 04 Jul 2026 09:03:04 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Catharine May

[redacted]

From: helen whetstone <PII>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <PII>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Sat, 04 Jul 2026 09:13:01 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Ms. helen whetstone

PII
PII

From: Joey Glushko <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Sat, 04 Jul 2026 09:21:47 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Joey Glushko

[redacted]

From: Dana Carlson <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Sat, 04 Jul 2026 09:24:48 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Mr. Dana Carlson

[redacted]

From: Jacques Mounier <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Sat, 04 Jul 2026 09:39:37 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Jacques Mounier

[redacted]

From: Sandra Linabury <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Sat, 04 Jul 2026 09:49:42 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans. I esteem this Constitutional principle for all the many ways it protects citizens of every faith. As you likely don't need reminding, those ways include the following:

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Sandra Linabury

[redacted]

From: Vicki Smith <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Sat, 04 Jul 2026 10:24:43 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

The separation and freedom is what our founders wanted,  fought for and risked everything to bequeath us with.  America did want to be required to support the Church of England.  It's totally the reason the pilgrims came here.  And Amish, Calvinists, Brethren, Catholics and more; all Christians but with somewhat different traditions.  Defining or requiring specific beliefs is not and should not be the roll of government!  They are different and separate pillars.

Sincerely,
Vicki Smith

[redacted]

From: Royal Graves <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Sat, 04 Jul 2026 11:28:07 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

The separation of church and state integral and necessary to the freedom to practice or not practice religion in the United States. This freedom's value is made obvious by the tremendous advances made by individuals in this country in science, the arts, medicine, and many other areas of human endeavor. Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people. Our Founders recognized that religion, government, and society flourish when religion is kept at a personal level and separate from government.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Mr. Royal Graves

From: Glenn Davis <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Sat, 04 Jul 2026 11:30:35 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report actually protects religious freedom for all Americans.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. The government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another.

Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate. Otherwise you have situations like Israel or Iran.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. Also, preventing taxpayer dollars being used to fund a particular religion. Someday your religion may be in the minority and you may be forced to fund another religion.

Sincerely,
Glenn Davis

[redacted]

From: Monica Walk <[redacted]>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT: Separation of Church and State is Vital
Date: Sat, 04 Jul 2026 11:58:37 -0400
Importance: Normal

---

Dear Members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Please ensure the Religious Liberty Commission's final report reflects the vital role church-state separation plays in protecting religious freedom for all Americans.

The separation of church and state gives us the right to practice any religion or no religion as long as we don't harm others.

Church-state separation protects religious freedom for everyone—religious and nonreligious people alike. It ensures that the government cannot impose religious beliefs on anyone or favor one religion over another. Our Founders recognized that both religion and government flourish when they are separate.

Separation of church and state guarantees that students and families—not government officials—can make their own decisions about religion and religious education.

Church-state separation protects houses of worship from intrusion by the government, guaranteeing their independence and allowing them to remain free from political control and interference.

Church-state separation protects our public schools by keeping coercive prayer out of classrooms. It ensures schools are welcoming for students of all backgrounds and beliefs.

Church-state separation protects taxpayers from being forced to fund religion. Taxpayer dollars should be used for public purposes that benefit everyone.

Church-state separation ensures equal treatment under the law. The government must serve all people fairly, regardless of what they believe or whether they practice a religion, and taxpayer-funded religious groups must not use religion to discriminate.

Sincerely,
Ms. Monica Walk
[redacted]

From: kim Nero <PII>
To: "RLC (OASG)" <PII>
